DEMANDS DEATH FOR DORR

Mrs. Rantoul Gets Her Children Most of the Year

RANTOUL ALIMONY OF $150

Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul is to be allowed $150 a month alimony by her husband, Edward L. Rantoul, for the support of their two young children, and is given custody of the children for the eight school months of the year and general supervision of their education and training, according to an agreement filed with Judge Hall at East Cambridge today and made the basis of a court decree.

Mr. Rantoul is to have custody of the children during the four Summer months, but Miss Charlotte Richardson, their present nurse, or some other nurse satisfactory to Mrs. Rantoul, must be with the children while they are with their father.

The children must be kept entirely in Massachusetts, and no arrangement is made for either parent taking the children out of the State at any time.

This agreement is "pendeate lite," meaning that it holds during the time that the divorce libel filed by Mrs. Rantoul is technically continued.

Other Provisions.

Further provisions of the agreement include:

While the children are in the care of either parent, that parent must provide for their care. Mrs. Rantoul must provide for their schooling.

In case of illness of either child, the parent under whose care the children are at the time must immediately notify the other parent and provide opportunity for that parent to see the sick child.

Neither parent shall permit anything to be said before the children to diminish their respect for the other parent.

The agreement takes effect immediately.

During the eight school months, when the children are with the mother, she must allow them to visit their father any time for days aggregating not less than forty and as much more as shall not interfere with their education.

Judge Commends Codman.

The agreement was filed with Judge Hall by James M. Codman, Jr., one of the counsel to the agreement, and by Attorneys Thomas Hunt, for Mr. Rantoul, and William G. Thompson, for Mrs. Rantoul. William A. Gaston, who was arbiter in the agreement for Mr. Rantoul, was not present.

Judge Hall warmly commended Mr. Codman for his services in bringing out the agreement, saying:

"I wish to compliment you on the way you managed to bring about this agreement and the way you handled the whole affair.

"As regards to an alienation suit which has been reported, might be filed by Mr. Rantoul, Thomas Hunt, his attorney, said to a reporter:

"There is no action contemplated by Mr. Rantoul against any third person on account of developments or evidence brought out by this case. I know of no such action and can say absolutely there is none at present. Of course, I cannot answer for the future to come.

FIND LOST GIRL'S BODY IN RIVER

PAWTUCKET, Feb. 27.—The body of Amanda Sonci the ten-year-old girl of Cumberland, who has been missing for six weeks, was found in New River today. There were no marks of violence about the body. The child was of an eccentric disposition, and it is believed that she wandered into the water through some impulse. The body was found 200 yards from the spot on the river bank at which bloodhounds gave up the scent.

SENATE PASSES FARMING BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The Senate passed the agricultural appropriation bill today. The measure carries an expenditure approximately of $18,000,000.

Kissing by Teachers Blamed for Scarlet Fever in Quincy

School teachers who permit the children to kiss them "good morning" are blamed by the Quincy Board of Health for a serious epidemic of scarlet fever there in which two children are already dead and ten others ill with the disease.

The Board of Health meets today and it is said will pass a regulation forbidding the school teachers from kissing their children good morning or when some of the little ones bring presents to the teacher.

The epidemic raging at Quincy Point is also traced to one children attending the Washington school, where four rooms have been ordered fumigated.

Seven cases were reported, and when Dr. Frederick E. Jones, secretary of the Board of Health, took up the matter he discovered five more cases.

It is also reported that many of the parents have failed to report cases of the disease and are trying to treat their children themselves.

Marshall Guest of Wilson Today at Jersey Capital

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 27.—Vice-President-elect Marshall arrived at the State House this afternoon and was cordially greeted by President-elect Wilson, who escorted him into his private office. There the two remained in conference only fifteen minutes, when they went out to lunch. Mrs. Marshall was not with the Vice-President-elect.

President-Elect Wilson will not be obliged to confine his celebration of his freedom from public office to a hunger spring. "Non" Leary of the Hotel St. Andrews, New York, learning that the President-elect is to be a private citizen for three days before the inauguration has challenged him to a game of marbles.

"I don't know Mr. Leary, and I don't know how good a marble player he is, but I'll bet I can beat him," said the President-elect after he had read the letter.

TO ROB "HIKERS" OF HONOR OF GIVING WILSON MESSAGE

HAYTTSVILLE, Md., Feb. 27.—The "hiking" suffragists today were robbed of the honor of delivering the suffrage message to President-elect Wilson by delays which they have trimped nearly 250 miles from New York to Washington.

The story was a crushing one to the "hikers" and was contained in the following telegram received by "General" Rosalie Jones from Mary Ware Dennett, corresponding secretary of the National American Woman's Suffrage League of New York.

The executive board today voted that they present the message themselves to the Congressional Committee.

The message which General Jones carries was from New York suffrage headquarters. There was general amazement today over the telegram.

EVERETT WOMAN KILLS SELF WITH HUSBAND'S PISTOL

Mrs. Agnes A. Baldwin, fifty-four years old, wife of Edwin Baldwin of No. 2 Locust street, Everett, committed suicide in her bedroom at her home today by shooting herself through the head with a .38 calibre revolver belonging to her husband. Neighbors who heard the shot found her body. They notified the police and later called her husband, who had left home not a short time before.

Mrs. Baldwin had been in poor health. She was a member of the Friday Club, the Governor Bradford Colony of Pilgrim Fathers and prominent in social circles in Everett. She was a native of Halifax.

SOCIALISTS TURN DOWN HAYWOOD

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—William D. Haywood, head of the Industrial Workers of the World, who was prominent during the mill strike at Lawrence, has been recalled from the national executive committee of the Socialist party by a nation-wide vote of all the dues-paying members of the party. He retains membership in the party, however.

WAR AIRSHIP BADLY DAMAGED IN FLIGHT

ALDERSHOT, Feb. 27.—The army airship Beta was badly damaged today when she struck and became entangled in some telegraph wires while being piloted to earth.

HARVARD MEN OUT TO FIGHT FIRE

Five hundred Harvard students deserted their class rooms shortly after noon today to help the Cambridge firemen battle a three alarm fire that broke out in the Cambridge Coach Company's stable, back of the College House, one of the Harvard dormitories. The damage will be $25,000.

There was a big tank in the stable, containing hundreds of gallons of gasoline, and an explosion was feared at any moment.

Aided by the students the fire was confined to the stable. Nobody was hurt during the progress of the blaze.

Charles H. Lake, who owns the building, was repairing his new $7,500 automobile, when the machine suddenly back-fired. In a moment the machine was in flames. Mr. Lake tried to extinguish the fire with a hand chemical, but was unsuccessful. Mr. Lake ran to the street and gave the alarm. He was badly burned while fighting the automobile fire and was cared for by a physician.

Three alarms had brought the entire Cambridge fire fighting force to the square when the students looked out of their class room windows. Inside of three minutes 500 of them were helping the firemen carry hose.

The stable is located at the corner of Church and Palmer streets and the firemen feared that the flames would sweep down the long lines of paint shops and other small establishments in either direction. College House was also in the danger zone.

The First Church was sprayed with water to keep flying sparks from the stable setting the handsome edifice on fire.

As the fire gained headway in the stable flying sparks caught in a timber yard near College House, but the firemen rushed to the spot with several lines of hose and checked danger at this point.

HOLLIS GAINS ONE REPUBLICAN, BUT IS 4 VOTES SHY

CONCORD, N. H., Feb. 27.—Henry F. Hollis, Democrat, came within four votes of election today to the United States Senate. It was the thirty-first ballot. The striking feature was the breakup in the Republican lineup.

Secretary of State Edward N. Pearson, standpat Republican choice, up to today had been receiving practically solid Republican support.

Today eighteen of his supporters abandoned him and voted for John A. Bartlett of Portsmouth. Another Republican, Perley A. Richardson of Chesterfield, voted for Hollis.

The vote:

Whole number of votes	392
Necessary for choice	197
Henry Hollis, Democrat	201
Edward N. Pearson, Republican	138
John B. Bartlett, Republican	18
Robert A. Ross, Progressive	15
William J. Ireland, Democrat	12
Gordon Woodbury, Democrat	8
Chester E. Corr, Democrat	1

SENATE TO HEAR BRIBE CHARGES

The Joint Rules Committee of the Legislature today summoned Senator John J. McDevitt to appear this afternoon and tell what he knows of bribery at the State House.

The action was taken because of a speech at Quincy made last night by Senator McDevitt, in which he stated that there had been an attempt to bribe him since he became a member of the Legislature.

Senator McDevitt is a Democrat and this is his first term in the Legislature.

His allegation of bribery made in his speech was in part as follows:

Bills I introduced for medical treatment for worthy poor and eighty-cent gas for this city ran 63 against a powerful lobby, but I have secured consideration for them and will fight to a finish in their interest.

It has been my experience that any legislator may leave the State House richer than when he enters, if he so desires.

The amount of opposition against and for certain bills is remarkable.

I was in the Senate parlor one day when a Representative came up to me and started a conversation regarding my attitude on a bill he had introduced.

He was rubbing his hands. I knew what he meant, but had to see what he'd say, I said, "What's the matter, have you got the itch?"

"No," he said, "but there's $200 in it if you'll do your share in helping along."

Representative William J. Leslie, who was also on the speakers' platform, said:

I take issue with Senator McDevitt. That is not the way business is done on Beacon Hill. I have been there two years, and I never saw or heard of any offer of money. I speak for other members of the Legislature who are not here.

OWNER LIABLE FOR SHORT WEIGHT SALE BY ONE OF CLERKS

If a salesperson gives short weight to a customer, the shop owner is responsible, according to a decision of the Supreme Court today. Isaac Sacks was the proprietor of a store where fruit was sold. On October 11, 1910, his assistant, Morris Sumner, made a sale to Angelina Dina more Sacks was found guilty. He appealed to the Supreme Court, claiming that he was not responsible for the short weight sale, as it had been made without his knowledge or authority. Assistant District Attorney Henry P. Fielding argued the case for the Commonwealth.

$7,500 VERDICT IN "L" CASE UPHELD

The full bench of the Supreme Court today upheld the finding of a jury and overruled a verdict rendered by Judge Wait of the Superior Court, in the same case. Elmer E. Parker was awarded $7,500 by a jury for injuries he received when a street car of the Elevated collided with a truck which he was driving on October 2, 1909, at Dorchester avenue and Summer street. He claimed that when he started to drive across the tracks, no car was visible, for the car was cut off by the elevated pillars. He had succeeded in crossing. The jury awarded him the verdict, but Judge Wait directed a verdict for the company.

DORR, THE UNCONCERNED

This picture shows William A. Dorr, one of the most remarkable men ever tried for murder in Massachusetts, letting at ease, content with his confession that it was he who slew George E. Marsh, but in self-defence, and ready to hear whether or not the twelve jurors believed his story of the quarrel on the North Shore boulevard. The self-possession of the prisoner is expressed in the picture, which was taken as the trial closed.

SLAYER'S CASE GOES TO JURORS

District Attorney Harry C. Attwill, in his closing argument at Salem this afternoon, demanded the death of William A. Dorr, the Stockton, Cal., man who confessed that he shot to death George E. Marsh, the rich Lynn man, whose body was found on the Lynn marshes.

Following the prosecutor's address, the judge reviewed the evidence, and the case was then for the consideration of the twelve men who are to decide Dorr's fate.

Plea for Dorr's Life.

Before Mr. Attwill summed up, Attorney C. Neal Barney had delivered an impassioned plea for Dorr's life, declaring that everything showed that he had killed Marsh in self defense as he testified on the stand yesterday.

District Attorney Attwill began to sum up at 12:25.

Barney had argued two hours. All the evidence was in by 10:10. There was a brief rebuttal by the State. Adjournment was taken after Mr. Attwill had talked twenty minutes. He resumed at 2 o'clock. A verdict is expected tonight.

The trial has lasted ten days.

District Attorney Attwill told the jury and a shocked community demanded justice and that the murderer of the slain must be put into motion to punish the culprit.

He said in part:

"George E. Marsh, an estimable citizen and a business man of Lynn, was found dead on the Lynn marshes.

Discusses the Crime.

"By the logic and overwhelming force of the government's evidence he is driven back step by step to the last stand where he is forced to resort to the only excuse left open—that he acted in self defense. And he was spared, not that you jurors of Essex County, have no authority to kill him for a crime committed elsewhere.

"You have seen illustrated in this case in a most amazing and graphic fashion the value of circumstantial evidence, as revealed by Dorr's testimony and admissions.

"The defense presents here is a defence of desperation; it is the wail of a man forced to the wall. The murder of George E. Marsh was most premeditated. Assassin waited for him and pounded him from day to day, ready to kill him as you would kill a dog.

"Men of Essex County, you must not be misled by the dust of contradiction and invention.

"The spectacular and property exposition of California is something that could be expended by the state. Less that on one land eliminate the defendant. M

Gunman Gets $22 In Second Holdup In South End Cafe

A daring holdup by a gunman took place in Fisher's Cafe at No. 955 Tremont street in the South End early today. The victim was George Goddard, the night attendant. The gunman got $22.

Goddard was held up on the night of February 15 by two men who entered the place. One of them held the gun. Goddard lost $23 then.

The robbers in both instances, according to Goddard, were familiar with the surroundings and proceed d in a business like manner.

Judge Depew Rules: 'Turkey Trot Very Near to Nature'

PALM BEACH, Feb. 27.—Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston and former Senator Depew of New York were on a committee that judged a cakewalk last night.

Here is what Mr. Depew had to say about cake-walking:

I have been watching this cake-walking with a good deal of interest. I should say that the turkey trot was probably evolved from it if I had not read an interview with a dancing master, in which he said the trot was the only natural dance and that all others are unnatural. My own observations are that if it is not natural then it is close to nature.

FINAL PLEA FOR DORR, MARSH SLAYER

Attorney Barney Declares Prisoner's Diary Shows He Could Not Have Planned a Murder.

tive? They challenge our motive. They say we have shown none. Motive is unnecessary, but we have proved it in this case beyond peradventure of doubt. This time and guilt for it do not depend upon an error in conveyance or an inaccurate deed of trust. It does depend upon what is in a man's mind when he commits a crime.

"That man there (indicating the defendant, who was huddled in the cage) his hands dripping with the blood of his victim, killed the man when he now tries to tell you was his best friend, wishes you to believe that he acted in self-defense, and that he was attacked."

Lawyers Criticised.

Criticism of the lawyers who were calling for the estate of James Marsh of Stockton, claim that an Essex County jury had no power to convict or pass upon a crime committed in Suffolk County and the assertion that the defendant did not make a plea of insanity were the features of the opening by Attorney Barney.

"The government has failed to establish a motive here," said Mr. Barney. "The first man in the world that Orpha Marsh and her nephew wished to die was George E. Marsh of Lynn. Do you believe the government, that the accused came East for the expressed purpose of killing Marsh. This is not true. He did not have murder in his heart. He came merely as a detective, to look into the affair, to talk with

WHERE WAS MARSH KILLED? IS QUESTION RAISED BY COUNSEL

In his closing argument to the jury Attorney C. Neal Barney, counsel for Dorr, said:

We have reached the point in this case where the government has to prove to you that a crime has been committed in the county of Essex. You cannot find him guilty unless Mr. Marsh was killed within forty yards of the boundary line.

Medical Examiner Pinkham said that the killing was instant. This is the question for you to determine. The law stipulates that he cannot be found guilty unless Mr. Marsh was killed in this county.

If you believe him guilty of the most atrocious crime, you could not find him guilty of murder in the first degree unless the government can prove to you that he was killed in Essex County.

George E. Marsh and to do what he could to help his distressed aunt.

"Let us turn to that diary. This is indeed a remarkable instrument. The government would have you believe that it is the chronology of a plot. But you heard from the defendant on the witness stand yesterday here he did not write it daily, as it is alleged, but after the tragedy had happened.

Asked Divine Help.

"As you peruse this little book you will see how the writer calls upon the Deity to help him.

"You will see how he was swayed by an irresistible impulse, how he was in the shadow of a great tragedy and overwrought mentally and physically. You can easily judge this, as men of affairs, by the mass of facts and circumstances and the queer sentiment of the book. You can see that the writer was suffering anguish, pain and horror of body and mind, which he could not have felt prior to the crime which the government claims he planned. It shows you how he referred to his aunt in the most endearing language, in terms fit only for a sweetheart, in language which he told you yesterday he had never used before to his aunt.

"We find in one sentence the expressions concluding with trivial entries about cash accounts.

"This diary shows the effect of a dire impulse. It expresses terrible mental straits and fatigue.

"If you were to believe all that that diary contained, if you are to measure its writings by the standard of everyday affairs, you would have to accept the writer on the ground of insanity.

"But Dorr doesn't ask that of you. He would be indeed crazy if he had done what the government would try to make you believe. But he didn't, and I am to call him crazy or insane. He showed by his conduct and testimony on the witness stand that he is not a crazy man.

Wrote Diary While Unstrung.

"When he wrote that diary he was unset. He can't explain with any logic the entries in that book, or can you gentlemen, or any human being. It is the work of a mind all beside itself—a mind distraught with burdens and trying circumstances. He knew that he had slain the one man in the world upon whose life depended the life happiness of himself and his aunt. He was unnerved and excited. He was disturbed and fagged in body and mind. He tried to explain in his diary in one sentence he would assume all the responsibility himself for the awful tragedy and then he would have you believe that a negro had done it; that he had hired an assassin. His story to you on the stand yesterday was the true and logical version of this unfortunate affair.

"There was no plot or premeditation to kill Marsh. If Dorr had wished to shoot him and had come expressly for the purpose, as the government contends he could have killed Marsh days before, when he saw him one evening leave his house in the dark or on the Sunday he saw him on the beach. Dorr was not waiting to kill. He had been waiting for a favorable opportunity to discuss his aunt's financial affairs."

Crowd Sees Closing Scene.

In spite of the storm the courtroom was filled, but there was not the overflow gathering of yesterday.

Dorr appeared relieved and smiled as he entered the courtroom at Salem for the last day of his trial.

Sheriff Johnson said he slept well last night at the jail. Dorr remarked to his guard that he felt as if a heavy load had been removed after he had finished telling his story to the jury. He had been eager for days to take the witness stand and give his version of the killing, which he said was in self-defense.

The killing, Dorr said, was committed at the junction of Oak Island road and the boulevard in Revere. The government supposed that the tragedy occurred where the body was found on the Lynn side of the Saugus river.

The statutes provide that the State may prosecute a homicide defendant in the county where the major part of the evidence exists, if the crime was committed in that county, or within 100 rods of the boundary.

Where Marsh Was Slain.

The point indicated by Dorr, where he killed Marsh in the auto, according to the contentions of the defence, is at least half a mile from the Essex County boundary and more than a mile over the curving boulevard.

Dorr was on the witness stand five hours.

In rebuttal the government attempted to refute Dorr's story that he killed Marsh in the automobile within the precincts of Revere and carried about two hours in the car.

Inspector Thorne testified that he made a careful examination of the automobile for blood stains, but found none.

Cross-examined by Attorney Barney, Thorne admitted that the cushions were of leather, which could have been washed.

On re-direct, Thorne said he inspected the automobile with a magnifying glass. Inspector Burckes testified he found no blood marks on the automobile, but that he did find a blood spot under the floor where the body was found in the marsh.

"You are not a chemist are you?" asked Attorney Barney. A. "No."

"Did you remove the soil where you found the blood spot, for a chemical test?" "No."

State Detective Murray testified that the spot under the head was a foot and a half wide, and he felt satisfied it was human blood.

REBELS BEGIN FIGHT AGAINST HUERTA RULE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Fighting is going on between Mexican federals and constitutionalists at Frontera, thirty-five miles southwest of Agua Prieta on the Nacozari railroad. The insurgents seized the garrison and the government buildings and were attacked today by 100 federals.

A Maderista junta has been established at Douglas, Ariz., and the work of organizing revolutionary forces is going on rapidly. Recruiting officers are being sent into Mexico, and money is being raised. The United States is taking strict precautions to prevent shipment of arms over the border, but Mexicans in the pay of the junta are successfully running the blockade.

It was said at the junta that revolutionary uprisings had occurred at Hermosillo, Torres, Guaymas and Magdelena, all important Mexican towns.

At the junta the following list of rebel leaders was given out together with their respective strengths:

Jose N. Maytorena, commander-in-chief of the Sonora insurgents, 500 men; Mateo Ortiz, at Colonia, Morelos, 150 men; Colonel Obregon, at Guaymas, 800 men; Colonel Alvarado and Colonel Rivera at Hermosillo, 1,200 men; Colonel Juan Cabral at Magdalena, 300 men.

Several hundred Mexican colonizers are expected to join the rebels within the next few days. Many Mexicans are going from the United States to take up arms. Three hundred have passed through Douglas within the past twenty-four hours.

Having received word that Governor Carranza of Coahuila, who has declared against the Huerta regime, has seized the customs houses, postoffices and other government buildings at Piedras Negras, just across the boundary from Eagle Pass, Texas, and has opened them in his own name, Brigadier-General Bliss informed the War Department today that he has ordered Troop D of the Fourteenth Cavalry to Eagle Pass and will follow with four other troops of cavalry.

Carranza has informed Huerta that he will fight provisional president to the "last ditch." A pitched battle is anticipated within a few days.

MORE CASSIDY FOOD MEASURES CONSIDERED

Three more Cassidy pure food bills, among the most important so far considered by the Legislature, were advocated before the Legislative Committee on Public Health today.

Two of the three bills provide for striking out the word "knowingly" from the present laws prohibiting the sale of diseased adulterated provisions and prohibiting the manufacture and sale of impure cosmetics.

The third bill prohibits the sale of calves under four months old.

Joseph T. Auerbach, who drafted the bills, conducted the hearing for those advocating the measure. He said in part:

"With the word 'knowingly' in the present laws it is practically impossible to secure a conviction. While striking it out might, in a few cases, result in prosecution of some innocent agent of those really at fault, the fact that prosecution would be possible would soon bring about a better condition of affairs."

Joseph L. Johnson, inspector of animals for Cambridge, also favored the bills to strike out "knowingly." He said in his argument:

"All a man has to do now is to tell the court that he did not 'know' of the character of the impure food he sold and he cannot be convicted. Foods are being sold today dangerous to the public health. The passage of these bills would go a great way toward remedying the condition."

Representative Samuel J. Bropsy of East Boston and William J. Napban of Natick are recorded in favor of the bills. Alton E. Briggs, secretary of the Boston Fruit & Produce Exchange, opposed all three bills. He said that at present the retailers have no means of knowing whether articles given them to sell are fit for food.

Arthur W. Clark, representing the Boston Retail Provision Dealers' Association, also opposed the bills.

UNITED FRUIT DENIES MONOPOLY IN BANANA TRADE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 27.—Bradley W. Palmer of Boston, counsel for the United Fruit Company, testifying today before the House committee investigating the shipping trust, denied charges made by Joseph Ditlogrin that the United Fruit Company, through direct interest in the Atlantic Fruit & Steamship Company, was resorting to monopolistic practices to control the banana trade in the United States. Palmer presented numerous documents which he said showed there was a healthy state of competition in the Central and South American fruit trade.

NAME RECEIVERS FOR G. A. ALDEN CO.

Receivers were appointed for the George A. Alden Company by Judge Morton in the United States District Court today. The receivers appointed were Archibald Blaisdell, Arthur H. Brooks and William L. Wodleigh. Each was obliged to file a bond of $25,000. There were also made ancillary receivers for New York city. While the case involves millions, the bankruptcy petition was instigated by three creditors for $2,615.

SUFFRAGETTE FIREBUG LIABLE TO A LIFE TERM

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Joyce Locke, one of the best known of the militant suffragettes, whose real name is Olive Wharry, and who is charged with complicity in the destruction by fire of the pavilion in Kew Garden, was arraigned on the Richmond Police Court today and held for trial in $5,000.

"Militant suffragists connected with the setting fires to buildings in public parks are liable to penal servitude for life."

This was the announcement made today by Travers Humphreys, the public prosecutor.

The magistrate also issued a warrant for Lilian Lenton, an alleged accomplice of the Locke woman. She was arrested shortly after the pavilion was burned, but was subsequently released on orders from Home Secretary McKenna because of ill health.

Mr. and Mrs. Nute Will Now Get $6,750 From B. & M.

Mrs. Ella J. Nute and her husband, Henry O. Nute, of Lynn, will get the verdicts ordered for them last February by Judge McLaughlin and jury in the Superior Court. The exceptions taken by the Boston & Maine railroad were overruled today by the full bench of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Nute was injured on September 30, 1905, by jumping from a train on the B. & M., when strikers and strike-breakers started a riot. The jury ordered a verdict of $5,250 for Mrs. Nute and $1,500 for her husband. Mrs. Nute boarded the train at the Central square station in Lynn.

Shortly after the train started toward Boston the outbreak occurred. A man fell dead on the platform of the train with heart trouble. She ran through the car into the smoking compartment ahead, then leaped from the platform of the train without touching the steps. Dr. Richard C. Cabot, the noted Boston physician, was also a passenger on the train. He testified to the occurrence.

WILHELMINA HOLDS TRAIN, ROCKS BABY

THE HAGUE, Feb. 27.—Queen Wilhelmina and her daughter, Princess Juliana, are scheduled to leave here to join the Prince Consort, who is ill in the Tyrol Mountains. Her Majesty would not start until she got the young Princess safely. This delayed the departure two and one half hours.

GRIEF-STRICKEN BUT PROUD, SAYS SCOTT'S WIDOW

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Feb. 27.—Lady Scott, the widow of Captain Robert F. Scott, who perished with four brave companions in the Antarctic, arrived here today on board the steamer Aorangi from San Francisco.

Lady Scott sailed to meet her husband, but on the voyage she learned by wireless that his lad died a heroic death amidst the ice wastes of the south polar regions.

"My heart was broken by the news of my husband's death and the appalling thought that I would never see him again," declared Lady Scott.

"But in my grief I can thrill with pride at his achievements and at the heroic manner in which he died.

"From now on I will devote my life to my little son, who is back in England."

H. W. BLOOD DEAD.

BANGOR, Me., Feb. 27.—Horatio W. Blood is dead of pneumonia, aged 75 years. He was twenty-two years treasurer and cashier of the Bangor & Piscataqua Railroad and its successor, the Bangor & Aroostook.

"DIVINE," SAYS UNKISSED WIFE, KISSED AT LAST

BALTIMORE, Feb. 27.—Mrs. Theresa B. Deems, who said several weeks ago that she had never known the kiss of man, woman or child, has been kissed at last.

The tempter was her son, William E. Deems, who is now seven years old. She had never before kissed him.

"Was that really your first kiss?" Mrs. Deems was asked.

"Yes," she replied; and she smiled prettily as if the occasion was a dream long to be remembered.

"Did you enjoy it?"

"Oh, it was simply divine! Great! My boy kisses me every day now, and he has become a regular kissing bug. I let him kiss me all he wants, but no one else shall kiss me."

BLANCHARD OPENS CAMBRIDGE FIGHT

Pledging himself to name a committee of fifty representative citizens to act as Mayor's advisory council, Arthur F. Blanchard, candidate for Mayor of Cambridge on the ticket of the Young Men's Progressive Municipal party, opened his campaign last evening at a rally in the wardroom of Central square, Cambridge.

Old South Will Now Appear in Its Antique Red Brick

The Old South Meetinghouse, at Washington and Milk streets—built 186 years ago—is the latest Boston landmark which is to be restored to its original external appearance.

The ivy that has covered the front wall for nearly forty years is being torn down and the project is to remove the accumulated dark paint of generations, so was learned from a few years ago with the Old State House and the Old North Church, and to show the bricks in their natural red color.

TURKEY READY TO SURRENDER THE ADRIANOPLE FORTS

LONDON, Feb. 27.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says that confirmation has been received there of the statement that the Ottoman government has expressed its willingness to surrender the fortress of Adrianople. Russia, the dispatch added, and the Balkan states will dictate the peace terms to Turkey.

BURNS PICKS NEW ASSESSORS' CHIEF

Mayor Burns of Somerville has decided to make George H. Elliott chairman of the Board of Assessors, which pays $2,000 a year. Mr. Elliott has been a member of the board several years, and has been selected from a list of candidates submitted by committee favored Leonard W. Cole, its president, or James J. Shay, its treasurer.

INCENDIARIES ARE SOUGHT FOR FOUR FIRES

State and city police made an investigation today of four fires that caused about half a million dollars damage and which for a time threatened to wipe out a large section of Charlestown and lower Somerville. Officials of the fire and police departments are convinced that the fires were started by "firebugs."

Two of the fires raged at the same time. The strength of the whole Boston Fire Department and three Revere's was tested. Aid was sent from Chelsea, Everett and Cambridge.

All over three hours fire swept two big freight sheds of the Boston & Maine on Warren avenue, Charlestown. The undertaking establishment, carriage repairing and paint shop of T. Weston Bryant, No. 15 Austin street, was also the prey of the flames.

The fire spread panic among thousands of people, some of whom saw that their homes were threatened. Many took their household goods to the street. The railroad's loss is estimated at $100,000.

While the two fires were raging in Charlestown a two-alarm fire started on Mystic avenue, Somerville, and a large carriage painting shop was destroyed.

A short time later came another mysterious fire a quarter of a mile away. The interior of a three-story wooden building at No. 10 Dorrance street on the Charlestown-Somerville line was gutted by the B. H. Whitman Company as a storeroom, was ruined. The loss is estimated at $8,000.

18 PARIS AUTO BANDITS GUILTY; FOUR MUST DIE

PARIS, Feb. 27.—After being out thirteen hours the jury in the case of the twenty-two automobile bandits brought in verdicts of guilty against ten of the prisoners, four of whom were sentenced to death. The three women prisoners and Rodrigues were found not guilty.

The jury reported shortly before 5 o'clock this morning after having been out since Wednesday afternoon. The four bandits sentenced to death are Ediaune, Soudy, Maunier and Callemin. All are self-confessed anarchists. Two others, Carouy and Medge, were sentenced to penal servitude for life. Twelve others got one year apiece.

The three women, Maitrejean, Lecleve and Schoods, all Anarchists, were overcome by their good fortune. Mme. Maitrejean, who was formerly editor of the newspaper L'Anarchie, swooned. She has received an offer to go into vaudeville in the United States, but will probably remain here because of her two children.

M. Carouy, one of the bandits who was sentenced to life imprisonment, committed suicide in his cell after he had been removed from the Palace of Justice.

MORGAN'S BENT FIGURE TELLS ILLNESS STORY

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA.

The American's Special Commissioner, dispatched from Rome to Cairo to learn exactly J. P. Morgan's state of health.

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan, as he appeared on the veranda of Shepheard's Hotel here today, would scarcely be recognized by those who saw him last from the steamship Adriatic at Naples a month ago.

Mr. Morgan's figure is markedly bent, his cheeks are sunken. With unsteady hand the American money king supported himself on a heavy walking stick, while his faithful Italian courier assisted him to his carriage.

After he had been confined to his bed for two consecutive days because his temperature rose persistently, Mr. Morgan was permitted by his physician to take one hour's drive. The American Consul accompanied him.

Returning from the short drive, Mr. Morgan rested in a comfortable chair on the hotel veranda for half an hour. Then Dr. Tribe, who is in attendance on the financier every moment, day and night, approached him and ordered him to his apartment.

Physician Puzzled.

The chief and most alarming symptom of Mr. Morgan's illness is a sudden rise of temperature, which recurs unexpectedly, despite all his physician's efforts to prevent it.

Even after Mr. Morgan has been "definitely well" for a couple of days, after his temperature is nearly normal, it rises suddenly two or three degrees. This fevering state is accompanied necessarily by an accelerated pulse.

That they have vainly combatted this rise of temperature is the chief cause of anxiety to Mr. Morgan's physicians and friends. Whatever provokes it, the rise of temperature explains, in part, Mr. Morgan's loss of flesh.

Professor Bastianelli, the specialist whom Mr. Morgan summoned from Rome, is now here. He has made his first examination of his patient.

Dr. Bastianelli will not attempt to make a diagnosis until he has studied the history of the case, has learned every fact about Mr. Morgan's attack when he was up the Nile, and observed him for several days.

No fears for the banker are entertained for the present, the AMERICAN'S commissioner is able to state.

The weakness Mr. Morgan manifested today has increased very gradually. When he visited Luxor, he and his party drove out to view the famous temple of Karnak. Not feeling very well, Mr. Morgan wished to drive through the ruins instead of taxing his strength by walking, as every visitor must, but the native official in charge would not allow even a Morgan to drive around the ruins.

MRS. A. CAMPBELL

Mrs. Campbell's doctor advised her to take a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey before each meal. She did so and recovered health and youthful feeling.

"Eight years ago, when sick, I lost my appetite. I could not eat solid foods. My family physician advised taking a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey before each meal as a stimulant, as it was good for the system. It did much more good than the doctor said. I feel more like fifty years old than sixty-nine. My appetite is splendid, and I find a tablespoonful of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is very invigorating. A dealer tried to sell me a substitute for Duffy's, but the doctor told me to insist on the genuine; that some dealers tried to sell something else to make more profit on inferior goods." Mrs. A. Campbell, 1111 West Ninth Street, Spokane, Wash.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Mrs. Campbell's experience is similar to that of thousands of men and women who have been brought back to a state of health and vigor by using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as directed. Many learn its great medicinal value first from their own family doctors. Others hear from friends or relatives direct. Still others read the testimonials of those who are so grateful to Duffy's that they wish to aid fellow sufferers by writing of their good fortune in using this pure malt whiskey.

Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by druggists, grocers and dealers, at $1.00 a large bottle. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a valuable illustrated medicinal booklet.

Goodyear Plant May Close if I. W. W. Strike Continues

AKRON, O., Feb. 27.—President F. A. Seiberling of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, one of the many tire factories here affected by a strike, declared today that he would close up the Goodyear Plant indefinitely rather than deal with the I. W. W., whose officials are directing the strike. "We will arbitrate any differences and grievances which may exist only with the employes of the Goodyear Company," declared President Seiberling. "The trouble originated over a matter that should have been adjusted to everyone's satisfaction, and doubtless would have been so adjusted had it not been for the meddlesome interference of outsiders."

2 CITY CONCERTS AND ORGAN RECITAL

Two concerts and an organ recital are scheduled by the Music Department of the city for next week. The first, a chamber concert, will be given in the Lewis School, Roxbury, Tuesday evening. Mme. Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, soprano; Carl Webster, violoncellist; Olive Whitelay Hilton, violinist, and Cora Gooch Brooks, pianist, will be the soloist. On Wednesday evening there will be an orchestral concert in the South Boston High School, with Professor Louis C. Elson as lecturer. The soloists will be Miss Genevieve Louise Forbes, soprano, and Mr. Mont Arey, clarinetist. The municipal organ recital will be given in the Arlington Street Church Friday evening, by John A. O'Shea, assisted by Howard White, baritone.

N. E. DEMOCRATS TO MEET SUNDAY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Congressman Peters has called a meeting of the New England Democrats in the next Congress to discuss "affairs of the coming administration." The meeting will be held at the Metropolitan Club here Sunday night, that night being the only one available before inauguration day, because the House will be in session Saturday and Monday nights.

Musterole--Quick Relief! No Blister!

MUSTEROLE is a clear, white ointment, made with the oil of mustard. It does all the work of the old-fashioned mustard plaster—does it better and does not blister. You do not have to bother with a cloth. You simply rub it on—and the pain is gone!

Millions of people have adopted MUSTEROLE in place of the mustard plaster.

You will find it in large hospitals. Doctors and nurses use MUSTEROLE and recommend it to their patients.

They will gladly tell you what relief it gives from Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Croup, Stiff Neck, Asthma, Neuralgia, Congestion, Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Pains and Aches of the Back or Joints, Sprains, Sore Muscles, Bruises, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, Colds of the Chest (it prevents Pneumonia).

At your druggist's in 25c and 50c jars, and a special large hospital size for $2.50.

Accept no substitute. If your druggist cannot supply you, send 25c or 50c to the Musterole Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and we will mail you a jar, postage prepaid.

THIS NEW GUN MAY CHANGE WARFARE

WARREN, Pa., Feb. 27.—L. A. Gannon, a Sheffield machinist, is at work upon a new gun which he believes will revolutionize modern warfare. Mr. Gannon says the weapon will use compressed air for its propelling force and will kill at from two and one-half to three miles. It will be noiseless, of 50 calibre, weigh about 200 pounds and discharge bullets at the rate of 250 a minute.

Officers of 9th Regiment Give Gen. Sullivan a Clock

General John J. Sullivan, retired, formerly Colonel of the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M., has been given a handsome clock by the officers of the command. The clock, in a colonial mahogany case, occupies a prominent place in the General's home at No. 560 Newbury street, today.

The girl was a surprise to the General His wife had known about it some time, however, and so, when the officers arrived with it they found an informal dinner ready for them.

Colonel Edward L. Logan, Justice of the South Boston Municipal Court, made the presentation. General Sullivan responded. Those in the party were: Colonel E. L. Logan, Major P. F. Butler, Chaplain M. J. O'Conner, Captain J. J. Barry, Captain H. D. Crowley, Lieutenants John A. Dunn and R. L. Burley, all of Boston; Captain J. P. Kane of Lawrence, Captain W. L. Conrad of New York, Captain D. J. Murphy of Natick, Lieutenant Cleveland Morse of Clinton, Joseph A. Ryan and Henry L. Hoey, representing the Ninth Regiment Civilians' Association.

General Sullivan was retired just after the Lawrence strike, and nearly all the officers who visited him had served with him for one or fifteen years, some of them in the Spanish-American war.

'Fast Local' From Woburn on B. & M. Suffers Paralysis

If you live at Woburn, Woburn Highlands, Cross Street, Winchester, Wedgemere, West Medford or Medford Hillside, and come into town by the train leaving the Woburn station of the Boston & Maine at 8:59 you were almost an hour late to work today. Reason? One of Charles Sanger Mellen's ancient and honorable engines broke down, of course.

The 8:59 "fast local" comes from Boston every morning (weather permitting). It is switched about at Woburn and comes back to Boston, picking up passengers at the stations above mentioned.

Today the dear old locomotive drawing those dear old coaches broke down at Winchester on the way out. Consequently, the 8:59 "fast local" didn't leave Woburn until 9:42.

Meanwhile, angry passengers waited in the sleet storm, huddled about the wood fires in Mr. Mellen's "handsome" stations (Woburn, Winchester and West Medford excepted).

Finally, after forty-two minutes of waiting, the two hundred or more patrons of the B. & M. who take this train every day were on their way to Boston. They arrived at the North Station at 10:16 instead of 9:30 o'clock.

GETTING GRAY? USE SAGE TEA TO RESTORE NATURAL COLOR OF HAIR

Says Sage and Sulphur Darkens Hair Beautifully and Ends Dandruff.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair, says a well-known local pharmacist. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and even today this simple preparation has no equal. Millions of women and men, too, who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Nowadays we are not bothered with the task of gathering the sage leaves and the mussy mixing at home. Simply ask at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of the ready to use preparation, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Customers like this best because it darkens so naturally; so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it contains ingredients which take off dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. No, it isn't a dye or even like it.

You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it brings back the glose and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

CASSIDY SHOWS WHY PRESENT FOOD LAWS SHOULD BE CHANGED

Mr. Cassidy today concludes his series of articles on Hamburg steak. Today he shows why the present laws in Massachusetts on this subject are wrong, why they should be changed, and why preservatives should be barred from use in food.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The Massachusetts laws, Chapter 75, Section 18, read: Food shall be deemed to be adulterated * * * if it consists wholly or in part of a diseased, decomposed, putrid, tainted, or rotten animal * * * substance, or if it contains an added antiseptic or preservative substance except common table salt, saltpetre, cane sugar, alcohol, vinegar, spices, or in smoked food, the natural products of the smoking process; but this paragraph * * * shall not apply to any such article if it bears a label on which the presence and percentage of every such antiseptic or preservative are clearly indicated * * *

That, I believe, is the portion of the Massachusetts food laws which applies to Hamburg steak, and to the use of preservatives in that steak.

I wish to recite here, first, the results of my investigation of Massachusetts conditions under this law; and, second, to show why this law is not adequate.

The Hamburg steak sold in Boston, which contains preservatives, is sold under one of three conditions:

First—It is not marked at all.

Second—It is stamped with a rubber stamp.

Third—It is sold in a paper with a printed label.

Violation of Law.

The first of these cases is a clear violation of the law. In the second case—where the brown paper in which the meat is placed is stamped with a rubber stamp—the marking is apt to be practically illegible. I found in my own purchases that this was the case. Every package I bought or saw which was stamped with a rubber stamp was exceedingly difficult to read, so that it was impossible to determine the per cent. of sodium sulphite present, and so that it was impossible in one case to determine the name of the storekeeper.

In the third case, where the presence and percentage of preservatives are indicated by printed labels, the proprietor of the store is not only within his legal rights, but is doing his full duty by his customer under the law. If the customer chooses to buy meat after being informed of the presence of a preservative, he is at liberty to do so. The storekeeper cannot be blamed. This was the case with F. E. Gray, whose Hamburg was sold in a neat, clean, printed label declaring the presence of benzoate.

There is, however, one consideration still—even though the labels be plain. That is—this preservative is ordinarily shaken on to the meat from a shaker with holes in the top, or by the spoonful. Where this is done by a clerk or butcher, there is often little attempt to determine the exact percentage, or to keep within the label's statement. Therefore, in many cases, careful analyses of the meat would reveal an excess of the preservative over the declared amount.

Legitimate Preservatives.

That is the situation under the present law. But I believe that the use of preservatives should be absolutely forbidden, with one exception. The so-called condimental preservatives—such as sugar, salt, spice, vinegar—are, and should be, perfectly legitimate. Not only that, but they are of sufficient strength to answer any legitimate purpose in the butcher.

I believe, then, that the use of any but condimental preservatives should be forbidden—for two reasons:

First—The preservatives are themselves dangerous, harmful or poisonous.

Second—The preservatives enable the butcher to cheat his customers by selling them unfit meat.

From the testimony of expert witnesses, I have demonstrated that sodium sulphite is poisonous, or a poison. Other witnesses, also experts, denied this in the Pennsylvania courts, but the courts ruled against them. I found from the seller of Preservaline in Boston that this sodium sulphite preparation is the most commonly used preservative. Therefore, I say again, these preservatives are dangerous, poisonous, or poisons.

Freshens Stale Meat.

I showed also, from testimony in this case, that this preservative would freshen or rejuvenate the appearance of stale, tainted or decomposed meat, and that it would keep Hamburg steak, after being ground, so that one batch might last several days.

These facts, to my mind, demonstrate that such preservatives should not be allowed to be used in food. In concluding this series of articles, however, I want to offer some advice to butchers and to housewives and consumers.

To butchers—You do not need a chemical preservative on your meat if that meat was fresh when you ground it, and was not kept an unreasonable length of time after grinding. By refusing to use preservatives, and by letting your customers know that you have refused to use them, you will attract to yourself the best class of trade, and customers who will stand by you through thick and thin.

It is to you own interests, if you but realized it, to abjure the use of preservatives or other dangerous devices in your shop. It brings custom, and it removes all fear of poisoning some of the children who come to you daily, doing their mother's errands.

Pay More and Be Safe.

To housewives—You do not need to buy meat containing preservatives. Such meat may be a little cheaper. But is is full of danger to you and to your family. It is far better to pay a few cents more, and be safe.

Read the labels on your meat, and look over the paper in which it is wrapped for a rubber-stamped declaration of the presence of the dangerous chemicals that eat into your children's blood, and that hide the presence of venomous poisons in the meat on which preservatives are used.

And when you find a progressive, honest, clean butcher who doesn't use preservatives on his meat—patronize him, and bring your friends to patronize him. That is the way you will secure the purity of your food supply.

NERVE AILMENTS ARE RECOGNIZED AS GRAVE MENACE

"I have noticed a very definite relation between nervous debility and weakness in the consistency of the blood," said John Beasley Webb, who is assisting in introducing Tona Vita. "When the nerves get out of order neither the red or the white corpuscles perform with the necessary activity. Sufficient oxygen is not carried to every portion of the body for conservation of nature's energy and the invading forces in the form of disease germs can easily obtain admission.

"This is why nervous debility makes people feel weak and run down and also why it makes them suffer so many different pains.

"Tona Vita not only relieves the brain, but it also helps to form blood, rich in all its necessary qualities.

"Tona Vita has been particularly successful in all cases of nervous debility, which show their origin in any one of the following symptoms: Broken and restless sleep, sense of fullness after eating, pains in the back, drowsiness, heavy feeling about the bowels, dizziness, constant feeling of being tired, loss of appetite, or a general run-down feeling.

CLEMENT LAIRD POLLOCK DEAD IN DORCHESTER

When men and women, with a sob,
Pray to the utmost, and children cry,
The Hand that heals the sic and sea
Is opened at the sufferer's plea.

From poem by C. L. Pollock.

Clement Laird Pollock, newspaper man and special writer on the AMERICAN since this newspaper was founded, is dead.

The news of his death brings a shock to thousands of his friends and admirers throughout New England. His death was sudden and ended a brilliant career. He had reached the top of his profession and was in the prime of life.

Mr. Pollock was one of the best-known newspaper men in New England. He was big of heart and big of brain. His name was a household word with the masses of the people. There were many of these who never saw him, but who enjoyed that peculiar intimacy which is true of every great writer and his readers wherever they may be. The sympathy and simplicity which were the keynotes of his life made thousands feel the human pulse in his writings and made them his sincerest well-wishers.

The funeral of Mr. Pollock will be held from his late home, No. 124 Glenway street, Dorchester, at 2:30 p. m. Friday. The Rev. F. D. Hudson will officiate. The remains will lie in a receiving tomb for the present.

Mr. Pollock died seated at home in a wheeled chair. But a few minutes before he had completed a story for the Sunday paper, folded it carefully and laid it beside his typewriter. Through the day he had been in the best of spirits. He chatted with friends, among them a number of newspaper men, who called to wish him a quick return to health. Last night he was seated up to his desk in his invalid's chair. There he was writing when his son saw him collapse. He was unconscious. Death came to him while he was writing—the work and the greatest pleasure of his existence. Perhaps, could he have made a choice, he would not have wished to die otherwise. Oh the desk lay the "last story."

Few men have reached a similar position in the hearts and minds of New England people. To the public Mr. Pollock's name ever is a story meant the infinite pains of genius, in collecting his facts and sifting them out—meant also the shrewd presentation of the facts possible. He always told his story in words which were eloquently simple.

Made Friends Everywhere.

So it is that expressions of sympathy come from everywhere today from the many who have felt the influence of his pen. He saw the bright side of life and made others feel what he saw. His was the message of the silver lining—the ray of sunshine. He made friends and kept them. His work got him far in the world of the United States.

The fullness of his life on the domestic side makes his death particularly sad. His married life was ideal. He always said his wife was the inspiration for him in his work. It was she who nursed him through the weeks of his illness following the accident on the street near his home. It was she who was by him when he died. There is one son, nineteen years of age, whose education and training were the pride of the great newspaperman's heart.

Death came unexpectedly. He was on the road to rapid recovery, apparently. A month ago he slipped on an icy pavement, while on his way with his wife to a meeting at which he was to deliver a lecture. He was removed in an automobile to his home. An examination by physicians showed that he had fractured his knee cap. The physicians decided to wait until the next morning before operating.

The pain must have been intense. Mr. Pollock bore it bravely, without a murmur. The operation took place and was successful. Several days ago Mr. Pollock was allowed to sit up in an invalid's chair. His recovery was a matter of weeks only, the doctors said, and his friends were happy at the news. Then like a bolt came the end.

Helps Start the American.

It was about 8 o'clock last night that Mr. Pollock was seized with cerebral hemorrhage. His wife and child did all in their power and summoned a physician. In less than five minutes Mr. Pollock was dead. He died peacefully.

Mr. Pollock was best known to his friends as "Clem." His fame was considerable. Many of his special stories attracted national attention. In 1908 he toured the United States with Thomas L. Hisgen, who was running for President. He was Mr. Hisgen's adviser. On the tour he made more than 150 speeches. While his life ambition was wrapped up in newspaper work, he also lectured widely.

He was a fluent speaker, with a splendid voice and manner. His lectures have been heard all over New England. He was a frequent speaker at gatherings in Boston. He was also at one time a campaign speaker for the Republican party.

Mr. Pollock was born in Kimballton, O., forty-four years ago. There he had his early training and education. For a time, after finishing school, he was a teacher. Later he became the editor of a country newspaper. His experience decided his future. It wasn't long before he turned his attention to New York, where he secured work on the New York World, under the late Joseph Pulitzer. For ten years he remained with the World. His rise was rapid. Before he had been long with that paper he became one of its best writers and ablest men.

Was Great Writer.

When the New York Evening Journal was started by William Randolph Hearst, Mr. Pollock was secured. It was Mr. Hearst's ideas to get the best talent in the country for his newspaper. This brought Mr. Pollock to the Journal staff. Nine years ago, when Mr. Hearst decided to found a paper in Boston, Mr. Pollock was sent to this city. He played a great part in the organization of the AMERICAN staff. That was in 1904.

His success continued. His stories "covered" every feature from a murder case to the exposures of corruption of industrial evils. He wrote ably on all topics. His articles were strong and forceful. They had the trip-hammer power of driving home the essential underlying truth. What he exposed was usually quickly remedied. There were few who dared the terrible and yet simple logic of his pen.

Mr. Pollock moved to Dorchester when he came to Boston and has lived there ever since. He was respected in that community, which shares in the sorrow of his untimely death. He was a prominent member of Boston Lodge of Elks, and has lectured before that organization on a number of occasions.

In newspaper circles the sympathy and sorrow was universal today. Mr. Pollock was the friend of reporters and editors alike. He loved them all. They in turn had the deepest respect for him.

Tributes to Clement L. Pollock from His Fellow Workers

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Twenty-four years ago Clem Pollock and I joined the staff of the New York World the very same day—he coming to the metropolis from Ohio, I from Boston. Later, when Mr. Hearst established a newspaper in New York, we both joined his staff. In 1904 we came to Boston when the AMERICAN was established here. For twenty-four years I worked with Clem Pollock, and a finer man, a squarer man, a more helpful man, a more companionable man, I have never been thrown in contact with.

Clem Pollock loved his newspaper work. He loved to write. His range was something extraordinary. The most important news of the day was not too important for him to write; the most insignificant item was not too insignificant. Some of the best "stories" ever printed in a newspaper were stories from his pen.

He was a very prolific writer, and he turned out such "copy" than any other member of the staff. Tragedy, comedy, finance or sporting events were equally easy for him to write.

Clem Pollock had a remarkable array of friends and acquaintances. Everybody knew Clem Pollock. Statesmen of national importance were his friends. His ability to gather news and write it was extraordinary. He was an extraordinary newspaper man. I have never seen his equal.

Clem Pollock was a firm friend and a true counsellor. He was kind-hearted; tender-hearted. His simplicity was the keynote of Clement Laird Pollock—simplicity in his newspaper work and simplicity in his private life.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

While every man who worked with him on the staff of this newspaper is still suffering from the shock of the news of "Clem" Pollock's sudden passing from life, it is not easy to pay the full measure of tribute which his splendid character so richly earned.

Manly and chivalrous as the bravest knight of the days of errantry; tender-hearted and loving as the noblest woman; with a mind well stored with the harvest of a liberal education and garnished by long experience in the hard-fought field of American journalism; with a judgment so true and severely judicial that he weighed every question he wrote upon with the rigid analysis of tan jurist—always seeking for the truth and nothing but the truth—Clement Pollock was regarded by every colleague as typifying the highest standards of the profession.

Bright and happy in his disposition, modest, even to girlish shyness whenever his own brilliant work was praised in his presence; full of good comradeship; loyal to family and friends; true as steel to the interests of the newspaper he served so long; "Clem" Pollock has gone, all too soon, into "the golden sunset," sorrowed by every being who was privileged to call him friend.

By HARLEIGH B. SCHULTZ.

They die whom the world least can spare for work the world most needs done—they die and leave us help to the good of battles they have won. Their memories linger like a light to guide those whom death has most bereaved, for they whom the world most mourns, placed RIGHT before achievement—and THEN achieved.

So it was with him we knew as faithful friend, always loyal, ever true. He lived the life that men should live, and what he did and how he did it give incentive to greater effort on our part. He was a genius of a brilliant mind, richly tempered by a warm heart—the rarest kind of genius. This sings his sweetest requiem. The farewell of his friend is as simple as he would wish it—"GOODBYE, CLEM."

CUTTER HUDSON STRIKES IN FOG

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—The revenue cutter Hudson went aground near the quarantine station today, and four liners and two tug boats were forced to anchor near the Staten Island quarter of the harbor on account of the densest fog experienced here this year. The Hudson was taken to the quarantine wharf for repairs.

POLICEMAN IS RAGING 'GUEST' IN PESTHOUSE

Patrolman Frank Bradford of Swampscott is about the "maddest" member of the department today. It took him about two minutes to quell a disturbance at the Lynn city pesthouse in the Swampscott woods, which was all in the line of duty, but what angers him is the Health Board edict that he will have to stay there two weeks to see if he contracted smallpox while restoring peace. He sent to the station house today for a pipe and something to read, while the friends are besieging the Health Board to rescue the marooned patrolman.

The occurrence is another chapter in the turbulent history of Lynn's "House of Too Much Trouble."

According to the Swampscott police there were high jinks at the pesthouse after the arrival of a new nurse. The only patients are John Gagnon, of No. 446 Western avenue, Lynn, and his small son. He is recovering, as is the son.

In answer to the nurse's affirmation, the Lynn Health Board engaged another woman to remain until the patients could be discharged. It is the story of the Swampscott police that nurse No. 2 supply of liquor with her when she arrived. They also say that within a short time there was a disturbance in progress, and that one of the nurses telephoned to City Physician O'Shea of Lynn that "We're filling up."

FEDERAL CHIEFS TO END DEADLOCK ON ARBITRATORS

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—With the announcement today that Albert Phillips and W. W. Atterbury, the two arbitrators appointed by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and the board of railway managers, have been unable to agree on the third arbitrator within the given five days set by the Erdman act, the choosing of the third member of the board was vested with Judge Knapp of the Interstate Commerce Court and National Commissioner Clyde Hanger. No limit is set for their decision.

PATROLMAN DILLON DIES IN DORCHESTER

Patrolman Thomas J. Dillon, fifty-seven years old, for the past twenty-eight years connected with Station 11 at Field's Corner, died at his home, No. 17 Tenney street, Dorchester, today. For the last five years Patrolman Dillon worked on a police officer at the Mattapan substation. During his service he covered about all the routes in the district and was well known. He was appointed to the force March 28, 1885. He leaves a widow and a large family.

Carolina White Near Death as Autos Collide

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Carolina White of Boston, a member of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, and Mrs. Starkow Ryder, her accompanist, are confined to their apartments today as the result of an automobile collision on North Shore drive, near Lincoln Park, in which they narrowly escaped death. The prima donna was badly cut and bruised.

Madame White had left her hotel for the Evanston Theatre, where she was to give a concert. Her car was proceeding north, when an electric car, coming abreast with a larger car, attempted to shoot ahead and between the two automobiles. The electric skidded, crashing headlong into Miss White's machine. Both machines were wrecked.

SEEKS $70,000,000 FOR FORTRESS PLANS BETRAYED TO JAPS

PARIS, Feb. 27.—An amazing story is related in a Geneva dispatch to the Excelsior which has to do with a Russian baron, Ugo von Hinzel, now at Zurich. The Baron declares that he holds a claim on the Japanese government for $70,000,000.

According to him, three Russian staff officers of revolutionary tendencies sold the plans of the fortress including those of Port Arthur, to the Japanese government at the outbreak of the Japo-Russian War. Part of the money was handed to the Baron, head of the family.

The latter is in pathetic straits, owing amounting to a little more than $25,000,000 each, payable at Table on March 22, 1915. The officers further contracted to remain in the service of Japan until the checks should be paid.

MORMONS HERE CLASH ON VIEWS OF POLYGAMY

It's all over polygamy.

Somerville Mormons, under the leadership of Apostle Ulysses W. Greene of the Reorganized Church in that locality, say Back Bay Mormons believe in polygamy.

In consequence of this they will have nothing to do with them.

Apostle Greene has written a letter to all ministers in Greater Boston, asking them to distinguish between the Somerville Mormons and the Back Bay Mormons.

The Somerville Mormons have their national headquarters in Lamoni, Iowa. The Back Bay Mormons have their headquarters in Salt Lake City, Utah.

"The Somerville Mormons say, 'We do not teach, practice or believe the doctrine of polygamy, nor have we ever done so.' The Back Bay Mormons, who are located at No. 27 St. Botolph street, say they believe in polygamy, but do not teach it.

Believe but Do Not Preach.

For this reason the Somerville Mormons are cautioning the people of Boston to be wary of the Back Bay Mormons.

Elder William J. Van Orden of the Back Bay Mormons was asked by a reporter of the Boston AMERICAN if he believed in polygamy.

His reply was:

"I believe in polygamy, but do not teach it.

"We know nothing about the Somerville Mormons and want they say here, but we have nothing to do with them, as they are not true followers of Joseph Smith.

Frank Brown, brother of the Mormon woman who was expelled from a Back Bay school, said: "We are not ash and of being Mormons. I am not a full mormary here, but I have charge of the Sunday South farm up in South Royalton, Vermont, where we have as many as 5,000 persons during the Summer season.

"I am at present in Boston, because it is so cold up in Vermont, and it is true that my wife was turned out of a school in Back Bay."

Praises American's Work.

Elder Greene has asked all the Boston ministers to make a distinction between the Somerville Mormons and the Back Bay Mormons as their people are glad to welcome all to the services of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints.

Rev. Duncan McPhie of the Anti-Mormon movement in this city, stated to the AMERICAN in an interview:

"This is no idle agitation that the Boston AMERICAN has started, and I for one am grateful to that enterprising paper for giving such prominence to it."

"HILL TOWNS" INQUIRY NOW SEEMS LIKELY

A legislative investigation of the AMERICAN'S charges that the so-called Hill Towns' movement in favor of giving the New Haven Railroad direct control of the trolley lines in Western Massachusetts was largely financed by the New Haven is probable.

This statement appears to be justified by developments following upon the hearing given by the Rules Committee on the Stevens order for an investigation, at which several Representatives urged an investigation, and an opposition appeared except from Chairman Draper of the House of the Rules Committee.

Senator Blanchard, who is a member of the Rules Committee and chairman of the Street Railways Committee, which is considering the trolley merger proposition, will report to the Rules Committee as soon as possible, and on that report depends whether the Rules Committee will recommend an investigation.

New Meat Statute 'Stands Test by Supreme Court

The full bench of the Supreme Court has held valid the statute of 1912 requiring the stamping or branding of all carcasses of neat cattle, sheep or swine, slaughtered outside the Commonwealth, showing that the same are fit for use as human food.

The decision was made in the case of George W. Moore, who was convicted on a complaint arising out of having in his possession for the purpose of sale a carcass of veal which had not been branded or stamped as required by the new law. The Board of Health seized the carcass.

At no time was the veal unfit for food, but the violation of the law was the omission of any stamp or brand showing an inspection had been made and the carcass had been adjudged fit for food.

Under the Federal statute requiring inspection at the time of slaughter of animals to be used as food in other States the farmer is exempted from its operation.

In this case it was admitted that the animal was slaughtered by a farmer outside the State on his own farm where he had raised it, and it was consigned to a wholesale provision concern here and sought of the latter by the defendant. It was further admitted that in the slaughtering of the animal the Federal laws had

ONE BATTLESHIP, HOUSE DECIDES AFTER FOUR DAYS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—One battleship is to be the program, according to the House. For, after four days of debate, accompanied at times by a sense of disorder seldom witnessed at the Capitol, the House has passed the naval appropriation bill, carrying approximately $138,000,000 and authorizing the construction of one battleship, six low boat destroyers and four submarines. An amendment to provide for one battleship instead of two, as recommended in the committee, was carried by 174 to 156.

SEND IN THE 'WHOPPER' YOU USE THE MOST

Have you a favorite "whopper"?

If so send it along to the Lie Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass. The Lie Editor is collecting lies, especially favorite ones. What is your contribution going to be?

Let the merry lies come on. You can't startle the Lie Editor, for already some favorite "whoppers" have been sent in. Here are a few of the letters:

What a Button Can Do.

Editor AMERICAN:

I am the wife of a business man, and I must confess that I have to tell a lie to bring me in a while. My life has to do with sewing. Isn't that awful, when sewing is a woman's work, too?

Well, my husband has a habit of pulling his coat off quickly, which results in snapping off one of the buttons. He always finds the button and brings it home in his pocket and asks me to sew it on. Now, I open to sew on that button, for it's not much of a task, and besides it's my duty, but, honest, nearly a week goes by before I can think to attach that button to his coat again.

This is where I tell my lie. I pull it my excuse, but really, though I won't admit it, it's a lie.

When hiding the way the button isn't sewed on I say, "I was going to do that this morning, but you were in such a hurry to catch your train."

Now that's my favorite lie. When I say it I must admit that the sewing on of that button never entered my mind from the time my husband told me about it until he wanted to know why it wasn't done. BERTHA M. Medford.

Babies Cause Her Lies.

Editor AMERICAN:

Perhaps the lie I'm sending in may been used more than any other lie in this world. It has to do with babies. Often I visit a friend and of course the baby of the house comes toddling out to greet me. "Why, what a handsome baby," I say. In reality it looks to me like any other baby.

Perhaps it's a little homelier than some babies I have seen, but that doesn't make any difference I always please my friend and his wife by telling my little lie.

It's my favorite lie and I don't care who knows it.

Guess I'm not any more of a liar than some other folks who have to admire other people's children.

RENEW FIGHT OVER THE $400,000 FOLSOM ESTATE

The fight over the $400,000 Folsom estate was renewed today in the Norfolk Supreme Court at Dedham with two brothers and two sisters in bitter combat to break or uphold the will of their mother, Mrs. Julia E. Folsom, late of Brookline.

MOTHER TAKES VASSAR BRIDE FROM HUSBAND

POUGHKEEPSIE, Feb. 27.—Forsaking the higher education and defying her mother's opposition, Miss Ruth Martinie Collins, nineteen, sophomore at Vassar College, eloped with Arthur Howard Winn, her high school sweetheart, and married him.

Today the bride is practically a prisoner in the home of her parents, having been forcibly taken from the bridegroom, while he is at the home of his parents declaring he will not give up his bride.

Martin W. Collins, father of the girl, is a successful Poughkeepsie business man. The bridegroom's father, Elbert J. Winn, is superintendent of a factory.

Young Winn is twenty-two and is a bookkeeper for a local factory. After his acquaintance with Miss Collins began a few years ago when they were classmates in the Poughkeepsie High School, from which they were graduated in 1911.

"It was not that I objected to Arthur," said Mrs. Collins today, "but they are both so young and he is not established in business. I wanted a home for my daughter to complete the course at Vassar."

To Market street the bridal pair met Mrs. Collins, who seized hold of her daughter and forced her to accompany her home, declaring she would not consent to her living with the man she had just married. Little Miss Winn, frightened, and accustomed to obeying her mother's every whim, left with her husband in bewilderment and went home.

Harvard 'Dickeys' Do Clown Stunts In One Ring Circus

Harvard square had another open air free-for-all hodge podge of merriment by Harvard College talent. This time it was a one ring circus, given by the fun initiates of the famous Dickey society. A crowd of 300 watched the collegians do their comic stunts while togged out as clowns, Roman athletes and four-footed animals.

William T. S. Thorndike acted as ringmaster. John K. Howard and Samuel W. Skinner, dressed in black tights and red ballet skirts, scrubbed up the pavement of the square. Henry Parkman and John C. Jennings were the clowns, who made merry by doing handsprings. Henry M. Atkinson and David R. Sigourney, in satin tights and togas, went through a series of mock feats of strength, posing as Roman athletes. Edwin F. Atkins was the menagerie of the circus, going through the manoeuvres of a monkey.

When the feats were over the circus performers grouped about Paul G. Courtney, the Italian troubadour, and Charles O. Iselin, as a Persian king, to sing grand opera music. Later the candidates took turns at measuring the distance of Massachusetts avenue from Beck Hall to Harvard square with a haddock as the unit of measurement.

TAFT GIVING HIS GOOD-BYE HANDSHAKES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—President Taft is giving his good bye handshakes to official Washington. Today, as yesterday, he said a word of farewell to Senators, Representatives and scores of Federal employes. Two little girls, daughters of friends, saw the President for the first time. He sent them away happier for their visit with the memory of a Presidential handshake and with two carnations which he took from the vase on his desk.

Final arrangements for the departure of the President and Mrs. Taft for Augusta, Me., March 4, have been completed. They will leave Washington in a private car and probably by special train shortly after 3 o'clock that day.

Dr. Greene, Lancaster City, Pa., Jan. 14, 1913.

Dear Sir:—I just feel that I have to inform you of the wonderful effect Nervura had on my little girl. She had a terrible coughing for three right nights. We doctored with our family doctor and there seemed to be no help for her. Then we heard of Dr. Greene's Nervura. My little girl was almost 3 years old and remember, but was still paralyzed and could not walk well. I tried the Nervura, and she had only taken one bottle when she was walking. Her appetite and health got well again, the coughing spells disappeared and she has not had them since. Now she is 7 years old and weighs 60 pounds, and is well and hearty.

"HIKERS" PLOD THROUGH RAIN; DAY FROM GOAL

LAUREL, Md., Feb. 27.—Rain fell in torrents today as the hiking suffragists ploughed through twelve miles of red and sticky Maryland mud to Blandensville, where the last night's stop will be made before they enter Washington.

The Pilgrims were quite enthusiastic about leaving this town behind. Laurel's reception was not cordial; it was cold, truly one local was to worship indoor.

"If have room for only ten and I'm gonna pick who I want," haughtily announced the innkeeper. Those not chosen canvassed the town for places to rest their weary persons.

After numerous refusals they found places where three or four were permitted to perform their toilettes today in front of one cracked mirror, at a cost nearly equal to that charged at first class hotels.

BREAKS A COLD IN A FEW HOURS

First dose of Pape's Cold Compound relieves all Grippe misery—no Quinine.

After the very first dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" you distinctly feel the cold breaking and all the disagreeable Grippe symptoms leaving.

It is a positive fact that a few doses of Pape's Cold Compound taken every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken will cure Grippe or break up the most severe cold, relieve in the head, chest, back, stomach or limbs.

It promptly ends the most miserable headache, dullness, heavy cold and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, running of the nose, mucous catarrhal discharges, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this wonderful Compound with the knowledge that there is nothing else in the world which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound. Your druggist can supply—it contains no quinine—be sure you get what you ask for—accept no substitute—demand in every home. Tastes nice—acts quickly.

Had Night Sweats and Stubborn Cold—Now Well

Did you ever have a cold that would not let go, a cough that persisted, that prevailed over and made waking hours miserable? Eckman's Alterative is the proper remedy in such cases. Perhaps some simple medicine may be effective where it is only a tickling in the throat; but when your chest is sore and lungs are weak don't answer—then take Eckman's Alterative. Neglect often leads to more serious trouble; a case in point follows:

710 Cherry St., Phila., Pa.

"Gentlemen: In July, 1903, I first noticed the conditions that showed I had consumption. I lost weight rapidly; had a hollow cough, hemorrhages and very severe night sweats. My brother recommended Eckman's Alterative. In the fall of 1903 I began to take it. At this time I am perfectly well and robust. My appetite is great and my weight has increased from 110 to 140 pounds. Not a trace of my old trouble remains. I will gladly answer inquiries of this medicine to anyone."

(Signed) MRS. ANNIE EICKHARDT.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles and in nervous, run down conditions. Contains no poisonous opiates or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all druggists. Send for booklet. Dr. Benton Dreg Dept. and other leading druggists. Send for booklet of testimonials. Write freely to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional references.

"HILL TOWNS" INQUIRY NOW SEEMS LIKELY

A legislative investigation of the AMERICA charges that the so-called Hill Towns [illegible] sentiment in favor of giving the New Ha[illegible] Railroad direct control of the trolley [illegible] in Western Massachusetts was largely [illegible] by the New Haven is probable.

This statement appears to be justified by developments following upon the hearing given by the Rules Committee on the Weeks order for an investigation, at which several Representatives urged an investigation, and no opposition appeared except from several Republican members of the Rules Committee.

Senator Blanchard, who is a member of the Rules Committee and chairman of the Street Railways Committee, which is considering the trolley merger proposition, will report to the Rules Committee as soon as possible, and on that report the friends whether the Rules Committee will recommend an investigation.

New Meat Statute Stands Test by Supreme Court

The full bench of the Supreme Court has held valid the statute of 1912 requiring the stamping or branding of all carcasses of neat cattle, sheep or swine, slaughtered outside the Commonwealth, showing that the same are fit for use as human food.

The decision was made in the case of George W. Moore, who was convicted on a complaint accusing him of having in his possession for the purpose of sale a carcass of veal which had not been branded or stamped as required by the new law. The Board of Health seized the carcass.

At no time was it really unfit for food, but the violation of the law was the omission of any stamp or brand showing an inspection had been made and the carcass had been adjudged fit for food.

Under the Federal statute requiring inspection at the time of slaughter animals to be used as food in other States the farmer is excepted from its operation.

In this case it was admitted that the animal was slaughtered by a farmer outside the State on his own farm where he had raised it, and it was consigned to a wholesale provision concern here and bought of the latter by the defendant. It was further admitted that in the slaughtering of the animal the Federal laws had

ONE BATTLESHIP, HOUSE DECIDES AFTER FOUR DAYS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—One battleship is to be the program, according to the House. For, after four days of debate, accompanied at times by scenes of disorder seldom witnessed at the Capitol, the House has passed the naval appropriation bill, carrying approximately $128,000,000 and authorizing the construction of one battleship, six torpedo boat destroyers and four submarines. An amendment to provide for one battleship instead of two, as recommended in the committee, was carried by 174 to 156.

HOBSON REFUSES TO DESERT SUFFRAGISTS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Representative Richmond P. Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac, was the bone of contention over which the suffragists and "antis" held many heated arguments here. The rumor arose that Hobson had been wheedled to the entreaties of Mrs. Hobson, who is an ardent anti, and had decided not to lend the latter's aid to the big parade. Captain Hobson ended the strife by stating he intended to desert the red color of suffrage.

5 CENT PHONE RATE LIKELY IN NEW YORK

ALBANY, Feb. 27.—A flat telephone rate of five cents between any two points in New York city will be established if the Senators and Assemblymen pass the bill introduced by Mr. Lawrence, which has been reported and placed on the third reading calendar. The Senate committee reported favorably today Senator Duhamel's 10-cent telephone bill.

ASTOR WOULD HAVE BEEN A REPORTER

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Had fate not decreed that Vincent Astor should be one of the richest men in the world, he would have been a reporter, he said, before sailing for Panama in his steam yacht Noma. "I shall be away about six weeks," he said.

SEND IN THE 'WHOPPER' YOU USE THE MOST

Have you a favorite "whopper"? If so send it along to the Lie Editor, Boston AMERICAN, Boston, Mass. The Lie Editor is collecting lies, especially favorite ones. What is your contribution going to be?

Let the merry lies come on. You can't startle the Lie Editor, for already some favorite "whoppers" have been sent in. Here are a few of the latest:

What a Button Can Do.

Editor AMERICAN:

I am the wife of a regular man, and I must confess that I have to tell a lie to hubby once in a while. My lie has to do with sewing. Isn't that awful, when sewing is a woman's work, too?

Well, my husband has a habit of pulling his coat off quickly, which results in snapping off one of the buttons. He always finds the button and brings it home in his pocket and asks me to sew it on. Now, I mean to sew on that button, for it's not much of a task, and besides it is my duty, but, honest, nearly a week goes by before I can think to attach that button to his coat again.

This is where I tell my lie. I call it my excuse, but really, though I won't admit it, it's a lie.

When hubby asks me why the button isn't sewed on I say, "I was going to do that this morning, but you were in such a hurry to catch your train."

Now that's my favorite lie. When I say it I must admit that the sewing on of that button never entered my mind from the time hubby should tell me about it until he wanted to know why it wasn't done. BERTHA M. Medford.

Babies Cause Her Lies.

Editor AMERICAN:

Perhaps the lie I'm sending in has been used many times by other liars in this world. It has to do with babies. Often I visit a friend and of course the baby of the house comes toddling out to greet me. "Why, what a handsome baby," I say. And, say, they'll look to me like any other baby.

Perhaps it's a little homelier than some babies I have seen, but that doesn't make any difference I always please my friend and his wife by telling my little lie.

It's my favorite lie and I don't care who knows it.

Guess I'm not any more of a liar than some other folks who have to admire other people's children.

MRS. ARTHUR HOWARD WINN, woman "newly wed" snatched from her husband by her mother.

RENEW FIGHT OVER THE $400,000 FOLSOM ESTATE

The fight over the $400,000 Folsom estate was renewed today in the Norfolk Supreme Court at Dedham with two brothers and two sisters in bitter combat to break or uphold the will of their mother, Mrs. Julia E. Folsom, late of Brookline.

Miss Gertrude Weeks, an attractive young Boston school teacher, told of the life of Frank Folsom as told her by his mother. She said that Mrs. Folsom once told her that Frank would be the best looking and brightest of my children if he had lived right, if he had let wine and women alone."

MOTHER TAKES VASSAR BRIDE FROM HUSBAND

POUGHKEEPSIE, Feb. 27.—Forsaking the higher education and defying her mother's opposition, Miss Ruth Martinis Collins, nineteen, sophomore at Vassar College, eloped with Arthur Howard Winn, her high school sweetheart, and married him.

Today the bride is practically a prisoner in the home of her parents, having been forcibly taken from the bridegroom, while he is at the home of his parents declaring he will not give up his bride.

Martin W. Collins, father of the girl, is a successful Poughkeepsie business man. The bridegroom's father, Elbert J. Winn, is superintendent of a factory.

Young Winn is twenty-two and is a bookkeeper in a local factory office. His acquaintance with Miss Collins began a few years ago when they were classmates in the Poughkeepsie High School, from which they were graduated in 1911.

"It was not that I objected to Arthur," said Mrs. Collins today, "but they are both so young and he is not established to support a wife, and I wanted my daughter to complete the course at Vassar."

In Market street the bridal pair met Mrs. Collins, who seized hold of her daughter and forced her to accompany her home, declaring she would not consent to her living with the man she had just married. Little Miss Winn, frightened, said she feared to disobey her mother in almost everything, left her husband in bewilderment and went home.

WAIT CIVIL DECREE IN DEVINEY CASE

The trial of Matthew DeViney, a Boston advertising man, on a charge of raising a check from $4 to $4,000 without the knowledge of his business partner, Robert Greene, was indefinitely postponed in the Superior Criminal Court today. A civil suit between DeViney and Greene is pending before a master and until the latter's report is filed the trial of the criminal case cannot be held.

HIGHWAY ENGINEERS BANQUET TONIGHT

The engineering department of the Massachusetts Highway Commission will hold its second annual banquet in Kingsley Hall, No. 15 Ashburton place, Boston, tonight. Ladies will attend tonight for the first time. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Messrs. W. E. McClintock and Harold Parker, former members of the Board of Highway Commissioners, will be guests of honor.

Harvard 'Dickeys' Do Clown Stunts In One Ring Circus

Harvard square had another open air free-for-all hedge podge of merriment by Harvard College talent. This time it was a one ring circus, given by the ten initiates of the famous Dickey society. A crowd of 300 watched the collegians do their comic stunts while togged out as clowns, Roman athletes and four-footed animals.

William T. S. Thorndike acted as ringmaster. John K. Howard and Samuel W. Skinner, dressed in black tights and red ballet skirts, scrubbed up the pavement of the square. Henry Parkman and John C. Jennings were the clowns, who made merry by doing handsprings. Henry M. Atkinson and David R. Sigourney, in skin tights and togas, went through a series of mock feats of strength, posing as Roman athletes. Edwin F. Atkins was the menagerie of the circus, going through the manoeuvres of a monkey.

When the feats were over the circus performers grouped about Paul G. Conroy, the Italian troubadour, and Charles O. Iselin, as a Persian king, to sing grand opera music. Later the candidates took turns at measuring the distance of Massachusetts avenue from Beck Hall to Harvard square with a haddock as the unit of measurement.

REACH PORTLAND AFOOT FROM BOSTON

PORTLAND, Me., Feb. 27.—George A. Galloway, jr., Reginald B. O'Callaghan, Thomas J. Gibbin and Thomas Fitzgerald, who started from Uphams Corner, Dorchester, last Saturday on a "hike" to Portland, have arrived showing no signs of fatigue after their 128-mile walk.

TAFT GIVING HIS GOOD-BYE HANDSHAKES

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—President Taft is giving his good-bye handshakes to official Washington. Today, as yesterday, he said a word of farewell to Senators, Representatives and scores of Federal employes. Two little girls, daughters of friends, saw the President for the first time. He sent them away happier for their visit with the memory of a Presidential handshake and with two carnations which he took from the vase on his desk.

Final arrangements for the departure of the President and Mrs. Taft for Augusta, Ga., March 4, have been completed. They will leave Washington in a private car and probably by special train shortly after 3 o'clock that day.

Lancaster City, Pa., Jan. 14, 1913.

Dr. Greene:—I just feel that I have to inform you of the wonderful work your Nervura has done for my little girl. She had a stroke, paralyzing her whole right side. We doctored with our family doctor and there seemed to be no help for her.

Then we heard of Dr. Greene's Nervura. Our little girl was almost 3 years old and accordingly, but was still paralyzed and could not walk well. I took her to the doctor and had only taken two bottles until she started to walk better and walked back and forth across the room several times. Now she is 7 years old and weighs 50 pounds, and is well and hearty.

"HIKERS" PLOD THROUGH RAIN; DAY FROM GOAL

LAUREL, Md., Feb. 27.—Rain fell in torrents today as the hiking enthusiasts started through twelve miles of red and yellow mud mixed in Prince George's county between this city and the home plate they enter Washington.

The Pilgrims were quite enthusiastic about leaving this town last night. Long before daylight the hikers were astir, and by nine o'clock all had breakfasted and were ready to start.

The marchers presented a typical picture when three or four were grouped in a bunch, and from the looks of things at one time or another every one of them was equal to the task of being the center of

Had Night Sweats and Stubborn Cold—Now Well

Did you ever have a cold that would not let go? A cold that persisted, hung on, and made walking hurt terribly? I had such a cold. Attacks of a cough would shake me. Perhaps you have. If so you may be relieved to know it is not a cure for colds.

I got over the cold, but I had night sweats. I got over them, but I was thin. Nobody else knows it, but I was a wreck. I had no appetite. I had no energy. I had no ambition. I had no hope. I had no life. I had no anything. I had no nothing. I had no everything. I had no nothing. I had no everything. I had no nothing. I had no ever

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"SOMEBODY was telling me last week, George," said the Manicure Lady, "that they have found a cure for cancer. Gee, ain't that the grand stuff? It seems to me as great as the find the gent made that found wireless telegraphy, or the man that found the spineless cactus. Honest to goodness, George, I believe that it won't be so very long before somebody will discover a boneless head. Then all of us will be smart and classy, and nobody will be on the dunce's stool. But about that cancer cure, I think it must be great."

"I never got that far in the high school diseases," said the Head Barber. "I did get to the point when I had a good ripe boil on my arm once, and when the doctor said it might be a tumor I laughed it off and sure enough it just turned out to be a plain boil, one of the kind that is willing to listen to reason and dry up."

"What do all them discoveries do in the way of good, anyhow? When you are going over the great divide you are going over, and that's all there is to it.

"I had a friend that died last week when he was twenty years old. He was one of the strongest kids for his years that you ever saw. He could jump higher and run faster and fight harder and wrestle better than any kid at school. He never dissipated a bit, but he died with the grippe! Imagine a minor league disease like the grippe killing a young giant! Let them keep on making their discoveries—that ain't going to change the smooth workings of old Kid Fate."

"George," said the Manicure Lady, "you could talk to me till you are black in the face, but you could never make me believe in that heathenish fate dope. Brother Will-ard is all the time pulling that, too. 'Fate is back of this' and 'Fate is back of that' is all that calf brother of mine ever blats about, but I notice that he keeps a close eye on my pay day and tries to cheat Fate by sticking my pay for a nice-five-spot, seeing as how Fate has decreed that he is out of work."

"I ain't going to talk to you till you are black in the face," said the Head Barber, "but I am going to stick to my belief, kid—'Fate is back of it all.' It ain't because some of the greatest minds of all time has said that Fate means everything. It's just as I was saying before. If it isn't all planned out, why should a lowly twenty-pound kid die and some old bench warmer in the park keep on being a pest to himself and to everybody else?

"Look at your brother Wilfred that you are all the time talking to me about. He is nearly thirty now, and he hasn't done a thing in the world except to get hired one day and fired the next. If that ain't Fate, what is?"

"You are getting too fresh, George," warned the Manicure Lady. "If you talk that way about my brother, who never done nothing to you, Fate will send this bowl of perfumed soapsuds over your bean, which is the Latin for block and the Greek for head. I learned that word from a Harvard professor today. Goodness, George, why can't you get educated customers, like I?"

Another Helen

ONE of the ladies in fancy dress was though fair enough, a trifle stout, and we will not say that she did not look well out of the thirties. And there spoke to her a reporter;

"May I ask what character you represent?"

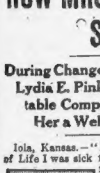
"Helen of Troy," she answered. "What did you think it was?"

"Well," he murmured, ungallantly enough, as weights and measures confused his brain and he gazed on her ample proportions, "I thought you might be Helen of Avoirdupois!"

HOW MRS. BROWN SUFFERED

During Change of Life—How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman.

Iola, Kansas.—"During the Change of Life I was sick for two years. Before I took your medicine I could not bear the weight of my clothes and was bloated very badly. I doctored with three doctors but they did me no good. They said my time must have its way. My sister advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I purchased a bottle. Before it was gone the bloating left me and I was not so sore. I continued taking it until I had taken twelve bottles. Now I am stronger than I have been for years and can do all my work, even the washing. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I cannot praise it enough. If more women would take your medicine there would be more healthy women. You may use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. D. H. Brown, 509 N. Walnut St., Iola, Kan.



Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

—All our testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

The Choice She Made

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

Here are two pictures—one of the woman she IS and the other of the woman she MIGHT HAVE BEEN. The woman she is sits around on the porches of the hotel—just now she is at a Winter resort in Florida—and gossips of the latest scandals among her friends and of the new arrivals, who relieve the monotony of her day.

Sometimes at dusk comes a vision to her of what might have been—a real home and a husband to love and care for her, while they both were interested in their child.

Years ago she made her choice. She liked the thought of traveling around and doing nothing, and took the rich, old man with his hoard of money. She left the poor young man, who loved her and whom she loved—and now she reaps the reward of her choice—but that vision will come to her at the dusk, when she is tired of her empty days and her empty life, and she'd give all she ever has had or ever hopes to have for the clutch of childish hands and the sound of childish prattle.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

The Widow and Paul Maynard Quarrel and the Engagement Is Broken. Keith Lacy Calls. He Sympathizes with Beatrice and She Weeps in His Arms.

BEATRICE MINOR did not ride as the black horse cantered up to the porch and Paul Maynard drew rein. She felt as if there were a dry lump sticking in her throat, and a faint qualm of bodily and mental nausea swept over her entire being—but her determination held firm. She had suffered too much already to alter her resolution; she told herself sullenly. She would simply tell this man that she did not love him and let the matter end there.

She watched Maynard's graceful figure swing from the saddle, and saw him pat the glossy neck of the intelligent horse as he looped the reins over the saddle-bow.

"Now, stand still, you dear old rascal," he commanded affectionately. Then he run quickly up the steps and hurried toward the waiting woman.

"You look absolutely worn out," he was saying solicitously as he approached her. "Did you do too much dancing last night?"

She turned her pale face toward him. "No," she answered coldly, "it is not that."

He had pulled off his riding gauntlet as he ascended the steps, and he took her listless hand from where it lay in her lap and held it closely, but she drew it away. He made no protest, but stood silent, searching her face with eyes grown suddenly anxious and grave, and for a moment neither the man nor the woman spoke. At first she resented his gaze defiantly, then her eyes dropped miserably. At last he found his voice.

Her Interview with Paul

"What is it?" he asked. What is the matter?"

Still she did not answer him, and after another silence he spoke again. There was a hard ring in his voice now—a note she had never heard there before.

"Is this change because of what Blanche told you last night" he demanded sternly.

"Yes," she exclaimed suddenly. "It is! How did you dare make love to me without telling me the truth! I cannot care for you now. I could not marry you, a divorced man, even if I found that I really loved you!"

If she had expected her suitor to display any violent emotion at this disclosure she was doomed to disappointment. He took a short step backward, then stopped. His face was pale, but immobile. When he spoke his words slid smoothly and coldly from his lips.

"It would have been better," he said, "if you had told me this last night instead of deceiving me as you did. I came over this morning to tell you the whole unfortunate story, believing that you really loved me as you said and seemed to show you did last night. But you lied to me then."

His sentences were cruel and went right home, yet they stirred up no anger in the wretched soul. Instead they cowed her and she did not answer him.

The man stood before her straight and silent for a minute. His gloves slipped from his hands to the floor, but neither of the actors in this little tragedy noticed them.

"I would have been grateful to you if you had not deceived me," Maynard continued evenly. "I am thankful to you, anyhow, for killing my love for you this morning. I see that I could never have loved you truly. I loved the some one you seemed to be, until now. But now my eyes are opened and I see you as you really are. As to the rest—it is all quite as I told you. I am divorced. Further than that I can tell you nothing. My affairs are my own and nobody else's. You tried to pass off on me woman's love of admiration and flirtation as love. You fooled me splendidly. I congratulate you. For the disillusionment I must thank my fortune rather than any human agency. Good morning!"

Keith Lacy Calls

He turned, went slowly down the steps and mounted his horse. As in a dream she watched his black "Ajax" bear him from her sight.

Long after he had disappeared she sat motionless, gazing down the driveway, where the dust raised by his horse's hoofs floated in the still sunlight.

Maynard's tones were yet ringing in her ears and his words coursing through her brain.

Household Suggestions

Butter can be kept as fresh as when newly made in the following manner: Wrap each half-pound of butter in a piece of muslin. Make a brine strong enough for an egg to float in. When cold put in the butter, taking care that it is well covered with the brine. Keep in a cool place.

* * *

Dance shoes may be cleaned very satisfactorily in this manner, and look quite fresh: Take a piece of flannel and dip into some spirits of wine, then rub the shoe with the grain of the satin, changing the flannel every time it becomes dirty. This will clean any light-covered satin shoes.

* * *

An excellent remedy for chapped hands is made by mixing equal parts of glycerine and whiskey together. Keep the mixture in a bottle tightly corked, and rub a little on the hands every night, and they will always be soft and free from chaps.

* * *

To remove match-marks from painted walls, rub first with a slice of lemon and then with a clean cloth dipped in whiting. Then wash off the surface with warm water and soap, and wipe with a clean cloth wrung dry.

* * *

When making a ground-rice pudding a great improvement to it is to add two teaspoonfuls of corn flour to the mixture. This makes it very creamy, and adds greatly to the flavor.

Some folks are continually having sore throats. When, despite all precautions, an attack seems imminent, he should dip his little finger into baking soda and rub each tonsil well with this every hour or two. Many attacks may be cut short thus. A rough, dry stocking, or a cloth wrung out of ice-cold water wrapped round the neck and covered with something dry, worn for a night will do no good.

If a white blouse or any other garment is stained under the arms, put it to soak for half an hour in warm water to which a little ammonia has been added; use no soap, as it sets the stain. Then wring, and if the mark has not entirely disappeared squeeze a little lemon juice on it and rinse in clear cold water; afterward wash in the ordinary way.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

An Unappreciated Wit.

LYSANDER JOHN APPLETON remembered having heard the joke when he was a child sitting on his grandfather's knee, and all through the years it kept step with him, growing old and gray as he grew old and gray.

It was never a good joke, which explains why it didn't die young, and until Lysander John heard Daysey Mayme grow hysterical over it, he had never heard it cause a laugh. It had always been met, as we meet an unpopular kin, with a smile that was forced.

So when the brick-a-brac with her mirth, and became so hysterical her father ran into the parlor to see what was the matter. There he found Daysey Mayme faint with merriment, and opposite her sat a young man with a high collar—so high had he laughed he would have choked to death. He smiled in appreciation of his great wit as Daysey Mayme, stopping between every word to shriek with laughter, repeated the joke to her father.

Lysander John staggered from the room. To laugh like that at that. He liked a good joke. Indeed, he religiously refused to subscribe to any joke book lest his sense of humor be disturbed by inane imitations of jokes, yet his daughter was having hysterics over a joke so poor any editor of a joke book would have rejected it!

"The next opportunity that arises," he said to himself, "I will let loose my sense of humor and will get off a joke that is one. I'll give her something to laugh at!"

The opportunity came next evening when Chauncey Dorrance, in the innocence of his youth, asked his father if angels were men or women.

Here was Lysander John's chance. "Always men, my son," he replied. "But pshaw," replied the boy, "I have never seen pictures of angels wearing whiskers."

"Well," replied Lysander John, taking off his glasses preparatory to laughing with his family at his wit, "it is only possible for men to become angels by a close shave."

He laughed so loud he did not at first notice that he laughed alone. Then he stopped suddenly and looked with suspicion at his wife and daughter. "Peculiar," he thought, "they didn't hear me."

"I was telling Chauncey," he said to his wife and daughter, "that the reason there are no angels with whiskers is that it is only possible for men to become angels by a close shave."

No reply, and not a sign of amusement. Then he went to his room and slammed the door.

He kicked off his shoes in anger. Suddenly a great light dawned on his mind. "Ah," he said, "it isn't the fault of the joke. It is because no woman ever laughs at a married man's wit."

Fat Is Ridiculous

Overfat men and women, mortified and humiliated by the publicity of conspicuous rolls and bulging parts of the body, gratefully turning this through the discovery of an eminent physician the burden of overfatness is taken from them, leaving the figure attractively proportioned, the flesh firm, healthy, skin smooth, and the general health vastly improved, without the danger of resulting wrinkles or flabbiness. There is no quack nostrum in this, but the famous Marmola Prescription, but there is a more scientific and more concentrated form of a tablet form of this safe fat remover, Marmola Prescription Tablets, containing the same harmless, effective ingredients as the original Prescription, that has enabled so many thousands of uncomfortable men and women to reduce their weight with ease, quickly at the rate of a pound or more a day. An excellent book on the cause of fat, Marmola Prescription Tablets is sold by druggists at 75c or sent free of charge by the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., on receipt of price.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

There was some uncertainty when stock markets opened today, but the increase in confidence which became evident yesterday was still an uplifting factor. Locally trading was quiet at the start, but coppers were firmer.

In New York there was some price irregularity around the opening. By the end of half an hour Reading, Steel and Amalgamated were among stocks to be quoted at advances. In the London market there had been a vigorous display of American stocks earlier in the day, they ranging above New York parity. That market was improved in tone. There was more investment demand.

United Fruit rose 1¼ in the first hour of Boston trading. Elevated gained a point.

American Can a Feature.

American Can was the most conspicuous feature of the New York market around the opening. Common sold 2⅝ higher while the advance in preferred ranged from 2¼ to 2½. Within half an hour both ended on profit taking. The buying of Can issues was based on the expectation that a substantial payment will be made on the preferred on account of accumulated dividends.

St. Paul was in good demand, moving up one point. Among the other advances were: Republic Iron & Steel ¾, Amalgamated Copper ¾, American Locomotive 1, American Smelting ⅝, Anaconda ¾, California Petroleum ⅛, Canadian Pacific ⅛, Woolworth ¾, Southern Pacific ¼, Steel common 1⅛ and Mexican Petroleum ⅛. Union Pacific shaded ⅛, while Reading sold ¼ lower, but recovered. Lehigh Valley lost 1¼.

The Curb was firm.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London advanced and Mexican issues showed improvement.

Views of a Brokerage House.

In their market letter for today, Thompson, Towle & Co. say: "The Bank of England statement appears to have lost in percentage of reserve only because of a large increase in public and government deposits in that institution. Repayment to that bank by Lombard Street bankers is in part responsible for the situation, which is healthy. Sterling exchange in New York is still high as a result of more moderate rotten exports and of exports of grain. Money rates here, however, are lower, both as a result of accumulations from the great crops in the South and West and from liquidation in the stock market. It is not yet thought that the rise in the market will be more than a strong rally against an extended spell of and short interest, but it is reasonable to expect investment support in many stocks of established value, and it is also reasonable to expect that the larger banking interests will prefer to sustain the stock market at a time when indigested and underwritten bond issues have yet to be placed."

Governor Sulzer's Relort.

When John G. Milburn appeared before an Albany legislative committee as chief spokesman of the delegation from the New York Stock Exchange, which opposes eleven bills pending relating to financial methods, he said: "This legislation means the branding of the eleven hundred members of the New York Stock Exchange as felons."

"My answer to that is that any person violating the law IS a felon," was the terse retort of the Governor.

London Copper Warrants.

The copper warrants market in London was firm at the opening with both spot and futures up £6.

It is reported that there was more buying of copper in Europe than in America yesterday, and that business was small on both sides of the Atlantic. The European price was 14⅞ cents a pound. The New York American expresses this view of the situation: "Copper metal is up such good demand as to indicate a sound underlying situation, considering recent heavy sales. Dealers with scant supplies are asking 15 cents for electrolytic, delivered in thirty days, while miners are offering to deliver the metal in Europe at as low as 14⅝ cents a pound. Germany has been a heavy buyer of late, and the demand is good from England and France."

Germany Needs a Vast Loan.

A Berlin cablegram states that Germany has decided upon a loan operation aggregating $137,500,000. Of this sum $100,000,000 will be of Prussian short-term 4 per cent treasury notes, payable in 1917; $25,000,000 of Prussia fours, and $12,500,000 of Imperial fours, not redeemable before 1925. The loans are to be issued March 2. The short-term notes will be issued at 99 and the others at 98.6 or at 98.4 if the subscribers agree not to transfer them. The holders of short-term notes maturing April 1 are privileged to exchange them for the new notes at par.

This is one of the results of the war in the Balkans. Although Germany has not been a belligerent, the expense of keeping her enormous army on a war footing to be ready for emergencies has been enormous.

Financial News in Brief.

The Detroit annual report for 1912 shows a surplus of $56,274 after all charges and dividends. The previous surplus was $1,822,183, and the total surplus on December 31 last was $1,888,458.

Baltimore & Ohio's $62,500,000 bond issue probably will be decided upon by the Public Service Commission of Maryland this week. It is understood here that the B. & O. will immediately file application with the commission stating the particulars in regard to the purpose of the issue.

Pittsburgh & Lake Erie has declared an extra dividend of 5 per cent, payable March 31, to stock of record March 21, comparing with 12 per cent, in 1912, 25 per cent. in 1911 and 50 per cent. in 1910.

National Enameling and Stamping reports for the eighteen months ended December 31, 1912, surplus after charges and dividends, $1,315,072, as against $171,157 for the year ended June 30, 1911.

R. S. Lovett, chairman of the Union Pacific Executive Committee, will return to New York from San Francisco tomorrow.

Regarding the business situation one commentator on that and the stock market says: "It is hard for the man who deals in stocks to understand why the business men of the United States fail to realize that trouble is impending. Take Union Pacific earnings, for instance. In January this company did a gross business of $6,758,000, which is a gain of nearly $1,000,000 over the first month of the year 1912. That provided for the various businesses in exposure and left net operating income of $1,729,000, or $461,600 more than was earned in January, 1912. For the seven months of the fiscal year the Union Pacific had net earnings of $23,592,000, which is nearly $3,000,000 ahead of the corresponding period of last year."

The earnings of all railroads for December last show an increase of $28,000,000 over the figures of the same month in 1911, according to the Interstate Commerce Commission's report.

The minimum rate of the Bank of England remained unchanged at 3 per cent. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is now 43.09 per cent., against 43.32 last week, and compares with an advance from 46.09 to 46 per cent. in this week last year.

Bald Men Will Have No Teeth or Hair and Only Four Toes

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Take heart all ye bald heads, for, by the words of a great professor, you are the advance specimens of a future race that will have no need at all for barbers. Rejoice and be proud, for you are far ahead of your time.

But listen! The mighty race, of which you are the advance agents, are to have other peculiarities of which you know not, for the great professor says that in addition to being hairless, they will be without teeth and have but four toes, the little one on the outside disappearing entirely.

Maybe, though, it's just as well you've got your teeth, for until such time as man can do without eating you will need them.

This forecast of the coming race was made by Professor Frederick Starr of the Department of Anthropology of the University of Chicago, when he said:

Hats, shoes and prodigeted foods have rendered hair, teeth and the little toe useless. The natural man needs hair as a defence and protection against the struggles of primitive life. We with our hats and our civilization do not need it. Persons with a scant supply of hair seem to die out among primitive people, but in civilization they increase.

'FAUST' PROVES A TRIUMPH FOR WEINGARTNER

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

"Faust" arrived a little late this season, but such a performance as that of last night was worth waiting for.

The genius of Weingartner had touched the old opera, for not even the excellent singers could account for the extreme pleasure the performance occasioned.

Weingartner, during his brief stay, has shown us that there is something necessary in opera besides good singing, scenery, acting and orchestration—co-ordination. Several times during his stay, not last night, there has been positively bad singing, and yet the general effect of the performance was inspiring.

And Weingartner is not a showy conductor. Last night you could hardly see him, so low was his chair, so that there is no question of being influenced by poetic arms and hair. There was something about the opera that was superbly, and I think it was Weingartner.

Farewell of Trio.

"Faust" is half a century old. Sometimes it sounds like a string of tinkling melodies and sometimes, last night, for instance, like a powerful musical drama. The loveliness of the melodies have never been questioned, and the opera itself will probably never be shelved.

It was the farewell of Marcel, Weingartner and Marcoux, and the importance of the occasion brought out a very great audience. Marcel and Marcoux, as well as the conductor, distinguished themselves.

To the ere, Marcel is not an ideal Marguerite, although the Flemings of the period favored plumpness. To the ear she was a source of unvarying delight. Her voice was exquisite in tone purity and sweetness, and even brilliancy. There is music in the score that is really out of her range, but she was wonderful at concealing it.

Marcoux as Mephistopheles requires superlatives. His devil is garbed in green, the color of poison venom, bile. He is the fool fiend incarnate. He snarls and snaps, and his viciousness is truly Satanic. Even the stridency of his voice is not out of place in the devilish music. This is one more triumph for the extraordinary singing actor.

And Zenatello. Enthusiasm again awakens at the loveliness, the limpidity, the lyric beauty of a voice which only yesterday was a sarlekng dramatic tenor. Never has the beautiful music of "Faust" been better sung, and for my part, I would rather have Zenatello in "Faust" than an army of polite French tenors.

Jeska Swartz Sings Well.

Coming to Rosti, the Valentine, our ardor cools. Rossi is something of a disappointment. He has art and a fine presence, but he lacks the big resonant voice of a first-class baritone.

Jeska Swartz never sang Sibel so well as last night, and she was a pleasing picture in her boy's costume. Leveroni was admirable as Martha and Ostbansky made much of the bit of Wagner.

The corneitist in the stage band blatted throughout the soldiers' chorus, and the soldiers should have held a military execution on the spot.

LADIES' GARMENT UNION HEADS TALK STRIKE TONIGHT

President Rosenberg and Vice President Mitchell of the International Union and others will address a meeting of the joint executive board of the six unions connected with the threatened ladies' garment workers' strike tonight at No. 31 North Russell street. The advisability of a strike will be talked over, it is understood. The ladies' waist makers have agreed to leave the matter of a strike in the hands of the executive board.

Now the men's garment strike is now lengthening out to a question of endurance. Two thousand one hundred of the 5,000 who went out first are reported to be back at work.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Milwaukee seems to be an awful hard loser. After having lost the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races of the future because of inefficient management of the 1912 cont.'t, she has taken steps to break away from the American Automobile Association and associate with the so-called outlaw association.

A tentative plan is on foot for running the Pabst trophy race in Milwaukee under the rules of the outlaw association. This in itself may be all right but it is difficult to see how it can be successful, since all of the famous drivers of the East and the men who can be expected to compete in a race at Milwaukee are and will continue to race under the rules of the American Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of America.

The A. C. A. is recognized abroad as a controlling body and until such a time as the international association sees fit to recognize that association they cannot, with the sanction of the A. C. A., hold races of an international character.

It is unfortunate for Milwaukee that because of a little pique she should place her best interests in jeopardy and take chances of spoiling what under ordinary conditions should be some good racing—namely, the Pabst and Wisconsin trophy races.

The Boston American's Policy for Civic and Industrial Progress In Boston

FIRST, a greater Boston Port.

SECOND, the extension of more railroads to Boston.

THIRD, the establishment of new steamship lines in connection with this port.

FOURTH, the encouragement of new business enterprises.

FIFTH, a systematic plan for the development of Metropolitan Boston.

SIXTH, the improvement of the streets and transportation facilities.

SEVENTH, the promotion of education.

EIGHTH, the establishment of permanent Grand Opera.

NINTH, the unremitting improvement of the AMERICAN, so that it may the better serve its constituents—the great reading public.

Let Us Have No More Street Planning by Cows

For generations the business of our metropolis has been done on streets laid out by no more scientific minds than those of the cows and the casual pedestrians who made the old cowpaths and the footpaths which are now our overcrowded thoroughfares.

Boston has suffered on these narrow, crooked streets, on which vehicles can move no faster than the snail's pace, and the still more crowded sidewalks.

The business of Boston is bursting out of these miserable straitjackets down town and pushing into the more open spaces along Boylston street and towards Roxbury. It has now, therefore, become of vast importance that our expansion should be guided by some scientific foresight, which will avoid wasteful and shortsighted development, repeating the old haphazard growth and threatening the old congestion.

The best modern cities do not grow up like rank weeds. Their growth is planned and laid out with scientific precision, by men who make that work their business.

This work of giving a growing city some scientific cultivation is now called "City Planning." Boston has recently awakened to its importance. Several commissions have been authorized by the Legislature to investigate and report upon the feasibility of giving Boston the benefit of these scientific methods.

Last year a Planning Commission for the Metropolitan District was created and headed by Mr. Edward A. Filene, one of Boston's leading merchants, with Mr. J. Randolph Coolidge, a leading architect of Boston, and Mr. John Nolan, one of the best known scientific city planners in the country, as his associates. This Commission made a report recommending that the development of the Metropolitan District should be placed under the supervision of a metropolitan council, representing Boston and the several towns in the Metropolitan District. The recommendation was lost in the Legislature, because some of the towns feared that the plan would ultimately lead to annexation with Boston.

There is pending before the City Council an ordinance proposed by Councillor Hale for city planning in the city proper. The United Improvement Association has a bill now before the Legislature also providing for a method of planning ahead of our expansion. The Chamber of Commerce has a special committee which is devoting its time to this subject.

It seems to be the unanimous opinion of the best and most active citizens that some method should be devised for guiding our rapid physical development so that our streets and sidewalks may be wide and direct; our buildings sightly and the homes of the less fortunate classes in our community the most favorable with respect to light, air, cleanliness and sanitation which conditions will permit.

The AMERICAN earnestly hopes that the Legislature will co-operate with the quasi-public bodies who are doing so much for the general welfare of this community, in working out THIS YEAR a method of city planning.

Score One for the "L"—It Is Willing to Stand the Cost of Making the Cambridge Subway Entrances Attractive

Some weeks ago the AMERICAN called attention in its editorial columns to the unsightly entrances and exits of the Cambridge Subway on Tremont street.

They looked good on the plans and they had some good talking points. So the Rapid Transit Commission decided to complete them. It was not until they were erected that their unsightliness became apparent.

The AMERICAN suggested that these structures might be so altered as to render them more becoming to their surroundings. But the difficulty of their alteration lay in the fact that it would cost money and this cost must be charged to the Cambridge Subway and ultimately be borne by the Boston Elevated Railroad. Therefore, the consent of the Elevated was necessary.

However, the AMERICAN ventured to suggest that the Elevated might be willing to contribute the cost of this alteration to the good looks of the city.

It now seems that the AMERICAN'S suggestion was not in vain, for we understand that the Elevated has recently informed the Rapid Transit Commission that it will agree that the cost of these exits and entrances may be charged to the Cambridge Subway.

The Elevated deserves the thanks of the people of Boston for its liberal behavior in this matter.

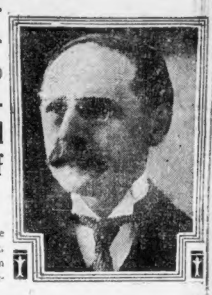
Marvellous Astronomical Discovery Due to Woman's Imagination and Sweetness of Temper.



Allowed Nephew to Destroy Home in Devotion to Star Gazing, Which Eventually Brought Him Undying Fame with Lack of Deserved Credit for Her.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

HER name was Mrs. Pound, and she was a widow. She was worth her weight in gold to English science, almost two hundred years ago, and all on account of a sweetness of temper that was truly monumental.

Without a single murmur, without one cross look even, she permitted her nephew, a young man named James Bradley, to take possession of her coal cellar and set up his telescope there. Then, when he proceeded to cut a hole through the basement floor, and Mrs. Pound saw the telescope thrusting its head up among the kitchen utensils, she smiled blandly and moved things out of its way.

Next, Bradley cut a hole through the parlor floor, and then one through the bedroom floor, and finally one through the roof itself. The telescope stretched itself longer as the holes were made for it, until at last its object end was on the roof, and its eye end in the cellar; and never during the whole course of this devastation did the Widow Pound's sweet temper show any variation.

She allowed a big telescope, like a boa constrictor, to take possession of her house, upset her kitchen, destroy her floors, displace her furniture, knock a hole in her roof, and the very simple reason why she submitted to all this was because she had the divine gift of imagination.

Although she was compelled to attend to her household affairs, her mind was capable of rising above them, and of judging the relative value of things. She saw that the inconvenience to which she was put was absolutely nothing in comparison with the satisfaction she would derive from seeing her enthusiastic nephew make a great discovery by getting his long telescope securely pointed at those stars above the roof, of which he was perpetually talking.

Mrs. Pound's confidence was well placed, and one day she felt amply rewarded when all Europe rang with the news that James Bradley had made one of the most signal discoveries that any man ever did—that of the aberration of light. In explaining what aberration of light is we shall see why Bradley treated his aunt's house so unceremoniously.

If you stand in a rainstorm on a windless day you see the rain descending in vertical lines, and your hat brim protects your face. Now, if you start to walk or run in any direction, the rain drops strike you in the face, because you meet them sideways as they are falling, and your motion is compounded with theirs so that they appear to come in slanting lines. The ratio of your motion to that of the falling rain will determine the angle at which the latter seems to slope.

The same thing, as Bradley found out, happens with the light of the stars. It falls upon the earth with a speed of 186,300 miles per second, but, at the same time the earth is moving forward in its orbit around the sun at the speed of 18½ miles per second. The consequence is that we do not see the stars exactly where they really are in the sky, but at a perceptible angular distance ahead of their actual places.

The speed of light is about 10,000 times as rapid as the earth's motion in its orbit, so that the angle of slope at which the starlight enters the eye is very small. Bradley, however, succeeded in measuring it.

But, in order to make his discovery—and, in reality the discovery he made was not the one he was looking for—he had to have a very long telescope pointed almost exactly overhead, and firmly supported by some solid object, than which nothing seemed better for the purpose than his aunt's chimney. This explains why he went down in the coal cellar to make his observations, while the end of his telescope emerged through the broken roof.

What he was looking for when he discovered the aberration of light was what astronomers call parallax, which is a slight shifting of the places of the stars, due to changes in position of the earth in its orbit, and by means of which their distance can be calculated. Bradley chose stars directly overhead, because thus he escaped the effects of still another apparent shifting of the starlight out of its true course, which is due to the earth's atmosphere, and is called refraction. Stars overhead are not affected by atmospheric refraction.

Bradley did not find the parallax he sought—it was too delicate a measurement for his instruments—but he found the aberration, a more useful thing to know, and so resistless was the charm of his astronomical work that after the death of his aunt, another even tempered woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, who came into possession of Mrs. Pound's house, permitted him to continue his observations from what was now his coal cellar, until he had made a second notable discovery—the nodding of the earth's axis, called nutation.

Urges Good of Foreign Languages

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In reading your clever editorial and the brilliant article of Ella Wheeler Wilcox of January 17, upon the subject of foreign languages, my memory recalled what I read in a newspaper some time ago.

A gentleman named Henry Nelson in a letter to a New York newspaper suggested a daily publication of a column in German, French, Spanish and Italian, with the corresponding translation into English, for the benefit of its readers, and I said: "Brave."

A few days afterwards a Mr. W. G. Weber ridiculed the suggestion, assuming that the readers of a newspaper are too intelligent to want to study dead languages, as the good American citizen wants to study only the good, genuine English language, and I said: "Bosh."

If Mr. Weber should, would and could only study English, he is his own born provided he has intelligence enough to comprehend and to master the true Shakespearian language, since that great writer and the other best writers of English studied and are studying, besides the dead languages, also the living ones, such as German, French, Spanish, Italian, and so forth.

Indeed, as your skilful editorial says, "To be able to read, speak and understand a second language is to have access to a whole world of thought and emotion which is closed to others, and to have a mind in better order, better fed," agrees with what was said by Lord Brougham: "The man who does not know at least two languages can be called only half educated."

The definition that Mr. Weber gave of those four languages as being dead languages, shows that he did not know what he was talking about, and in this respect I would suggest to all to read what the great linguists, Webster, Worcester, etc., said about the formation of those languages. Longfellow, Lowell, Norton, Howells, Crawford, all of them American writers of fame, and hundreds of other literary men, can tell something of the matter.

Charles V. said: "As many languages as a man can speak, so many times is he a man."

Talking about languages, German is spoken by 90,000,000, next by 50,000,000; Spanish by about 45,000,000 and Italian by 35,000,000 of people; are these, then, all dead languages?

In the public schools, as in the private institutions of learning in the United States, the so-called dead languages and the living ones are taught in order to make of our good American citizen an intelligent being, not a simple machine that only can perform the same work all the time, but a clever, smart person able to understand and to be understood by people of other countries, as the world does not consist of the United States alone.

This country is cosmopolitan and stands at the head of the commercial world; therefore, for all who oppose the study of foreign languages shows that he is behind the times and is still in Europe as regards business, because statistics about immigration and exportation from and to the rest of Asia, South America and of Australia demonstrate that these are highly important sources of wealth for this country. The Fifth International Congress of Chambers of Commerce and Commercial and Industrial Associations, held in Boston last September, with about 850 delegates from all parts of the world, and the approaching event of the Boston Chamber of Commerce extension tour to study the trade conditions and to establish closely relations between American republics and New England, are a proof that the learning of foreign languages ought to be compulsory in every school.

As a good, loyal and true American citizen, I do hope to see very soon such schools flourishing in every city of the United States.

As an Italian by birth, I am proud to say, with Ella Wheeler Wilcox, that "there is no other country on earth which has given all the arts and sciences so much genius as Italy . . . and the opinion whatsoever of the ignorant is scarcely worth noticing."

To the Boston AMERICAN, always at the head for progressive ideas, my best wishes for a prosperous achievement in all its undertakings.
